TREATY IS VOTED DOWN

BY THE REPUBLICAN MAJORITY OF UNITED STATES SENATE.

Politicians Try to Prevent America Making Good What Their Soldiers Fought For.

The responsibility for the peace of the world is in the hands of the Republican majority in the United States Senate and the people of this country should know who is responsible for troubles ahead with the Peace Treaty and League of Nations killed by this Republican majority. To give the world a treaty with reservations which are in effect amendments simply will keep our troubles with us for many more months. It does not make possible the reconstruction and rebuilding the world needs. The Republican politicians simply hate President Wilson and rather than see the Treaty of Peace go through are willing to see the world and America given over to an anarchy of unrest with nothing remedial in sight.

George W. Wickersham, the Attorney General in President Taft's cabinet, has warned against the proposed reservation amendments, saying as late as Monday: "In my opinion, the fifth reservation, respecting questions within the domestic jurisdiction of the United States; the seventh, involving the Shantung matter; the eleventh, respecting limitation of armaments; the twelfth, concerning Article XVI,—all vary the term of the treaty and therefore clearly, are amendments. The proposed nineteenth reservation, which has not yet been adopted, by which the United States would reserve to itself exclusively the right to decide what questions affect its honor or its vital interest, declaring that such questions are not, under the treaty to be submitted either to arbitration or recommendation, indisputably would modify the treaty and require its resubmission to Germany and to those of the allied powers who have already ratified it in its original submitted form. The remaining reservations seem to me to be innocuous, although the preamble requires, as a condition to the ratification of the treaty with those reservations, that they be approved by at least three of the principle allied and associated powers, to wit: Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan."

Herbert Hoover, one American who has the world vision without any mixture of politics in it recently said: "There are many elements in Europe who wish to see the treaty break down and the League of Nations disappear. For instance, during the last five months our Allies have been growing weaker from a military point of view, due to the necessity of demobilizing their armies, while at the same time the reactionary group in Germany has been growing in strength through the hope of yet securing a division of the Allies. At the time I left Europe a month ago, the German militarism had already re-established itself as a well-disciplined, well-ordered army of at least 400,000 men, largely congregated on the Polish frontier, and even defying the government of Berlin. Under the alarm of this danger, the Poles, in the midst of the greatest economical mystery that a nation ever knew, have been trying to create an army of 500,000 men for their protection from the Germans on one side and the Bolsheviks on the other. If the treaty is ratified the German army will be reduced to 200,000 men and dispersed over Germany, and their extra armament destroyed. The failure of the treaty means the invasion of the Polish State. This is only one of the powder magazines in Europe which cannot be destroyed until this treaty is ratified and during every day of delay more explosives are poured into them."

"I am confident that if we attempt now to revise the treaty we shall tread a road through European chaos. Even if we managed to keep our soldiers out of it we will not escape fearful economic losses. If the League is to break down we must at once prepare to fight. Few people seem to realize the desperation to which Europe has been reduced."

"We cannot fiddle while Rome burns. The Allies may themselves ratify this treaty without us, and thus assemble a council of nations of their own in an endeavor to solve the problems of Europe. It would be a council of Europe and in the midst of these terrible times, considering the debts they owe us, the material they must have from us or starve, I would rather that we be represented therein lest it become a league of Europe against the Western Hemisphere. A peace without us means more army and navy for us, with the old treadmill of taxes and dangers for us."

"Neither the gospel of hate nor the gospel of unpreparedness is the road to peace. The true road lies in every effort to remove the causes of war, not in tearing down such structure of peace as we have, nor in blindness to present dangers. Those who think we can isolate ourselves seem to ignore the fact that modern communication has shortened our distance

PAVED STREETS BOND ISSUE.

On last Monday evening the Town Council at a special meeting considered the matter of permanent streets, and after discussion the Ordinance Committee was directed to report to council an ordinance providing for an election for an increase of indebtedness for permanent paved streets.

It was thought that it would take $30,000 to pay the borough's share of paving Baltimore and Carlisle streets after Chambersburg and York streets have been built, and that it would take $10,000 more to put all the other streets in good condition. By reason of the miserable condition of the streets, the Highway Committee was directed to repair the streets immediately. Another bond issue of $20,000 was discussed for a municipal electric light plant. It might be better to contract for light for only a year at a time and if there is to be a second bond issue it had better be for a disposal sewer plant, so that Rock Creek can be cleaned up and remain clean and healthy to live close by.

The important matter however, is to get paved streets, and the coming of the great highways into the town urges speed in having the town well paved and not be a riding of bumps between termini of good roads.

MR. & MRS. KURTZ IN FRANCE

VISITING GRAVE OF THEIR SON, LIEUT. PAUL B. KURTZ.

Unpardonable Removal of Bodies of Soldier from One Cemetery to Another.

The Compiler has received the following letter from Wm. B. Kurtz, the donor of the Kurtz Memorial Playground in Gettysburg: To the Relatives of the Boys Buried in France: Dear Friends—I feel that a recent experience in visiting the grave of my son, Lieut. Paul Borda Kurtz, attached to the 94th Aero Squadron, killed in France, May 22nd, 1918, may be of assistance to those who contemplate going "Over There." After trying for four months to obtain passports to visit his grave I finally secured them. Had I been going over for commercial purposes, they could have been obtained more readily.

I went with the official knowledge from the Departments at Washington that my son was buried in American Cemetery No. 108, Grave No. 58, near Menil-la-Tour, next to his friend, Major Raoul Lufberry. I had received pictures of his grave and cross from friends and from the U. S. authorities, and felt that there would be no difficulty whatever in finding the grave, as I had notified the proper authorities at Washington in January 1919 that it was my desire that my son's body should remain there and received a reply that my wishes would be complied with.

Mrs. Kurtz and I sailed on the Baltic, July 12, going to Nancy, France, from which point we expected to go to Toul and then to the cemetery. In conversation with the Prefect of Toul, we learned that the bodies in the cemetery in which our son was buried had been moved in March, and neither of them knew to what place. Later we found that there was a large American cemetery at Thiaucourt. That afternoon we took a motor, filled it with flowers and drove to this cemetery. We met the caretaker near the place, a capable young American Sergeant, and on inquiry learned that Major Lufberry was buried there, and upon search found our boy's resting place in the row with him.

This cemetery is superbly situated on the top of a hill with a commanding view of the Argonne Valley. We were told there were about 5,000 of our boys buried there, in the ground over which they had fought. At that time there was no place for the young sergeant to live,—there was no office,—there were no records, and this large number of graves was cared for by two Russians, who had been prisoners in Germany and who lived in a hut outside the cemetery, and were working without pay for love of our boys, and no one, up to that time, Aug. 8, had had any instructions as to the care of the graves.

To this date, November 20, 1919, we have received no notice that our boy's body has been moved from its former resting place and anyone going abroad should ascertain definitely if possible, where their dead ones lie. At the large American cemetery at Romagne, where about 21,000 of our boys are buried, there is a competent officer and staff in charge, a complete card index, and there one has no difficulty in locating the particular grave sought.

Both cemeteries are most impressive by reason of the "Sea of White Crosses." These crosses are of wood, painted or whitewashed, with the name and rank of the boy stencilled thereon. The graves are simply slight mounds of bare dirt on which there is no grass growing as yet.

The removal of the bodies of our boys from their official burial places, without notice to their relatives, is outrageous and unpardonable.

WILLIAM B. KURTZ.

Punctured

By ANDERSON HALEY

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

P-z-z-z! B-s-s-sh! With the sickening swish of escaping air and the harsh grinding of brakes the gray roadster came to an abrupt stop. Jack Raynor sprang out and glanced sharply at his front tires. They were unmistakably flat.

"Well, of all the cursed luck!" he exclaimed in dismay. "Both of 'em and not an extra tube or casing. Nothing for it but to vulcanize the holes!"

Then unaware that a pair of startled brown eyes regarded him intently from behind the roadside tangle of bushes, he proceeded to say other things, uncomplimentary things about the road and the people who frequented it, things which it is unnecessary to repeat, but for which he will doubtless be pardoned by the veteran motorist.

For the mercury had already climbed to the "ninety-in-the-shade" mark. Presently, having exhausted his vocabulary, he flung off his coat, collar and tie, rolled back his sleeves and fell to work jacking up the front wheels.

Meanwhile the owner of the brown eyes, sensing the gravity of the situation, slipped unobserved from his hiding place and, berry pail in hand, sped across the adjacent cornfield to the small brown house beyond.

For a moment she lingered hesitatingly in the doorway. Then she disappeared within. When she came out again she was wearing a crisp brown linen dress with a deep white collar, in place of the faded blue calico, and she had on the bronze shoes and stockings ordinarily reserved for Sundays.

"I wonder if I dare," she whispered to herself in suppressed excitement. "But I'm going to, anyhow. It's the least I can do. He'll never guess how it happened. And it is dreadfully hot and dusty out there. Besides," irrelevantly, "he is splendid looking even when he's angry."

Ten minutes later, as Jack Raynor was ruefully contemplating two sharp tacks that explained the flat tires, his attention was attracted by a rustling in the bushes and, even as he looked, a slender girl of nineteen or twenty emerged, carrying a shining tin pail and a basket. His swift appraising glance noted that she was unusually pretty, with shy brown eyes, an abundance of soft brown hair becomingly arranged, and cheeks that glowed pink beneath their healthy tan.

"I thought you might like a fresh drink," she began timidly, extending the pail. "It—it's so warm this morning—and we do have good water—and on the way I picked these peaches—they're just ripe, enough to eat," she concluded setting down the basket.

To Jack Raynor, tired and thirsty from his strenuous work, the sight of the sparkling water was indeed welcome. Smiling his thanks, he accepted the pail and drank eagerly.

"I don't know whether you are a wood nymph or just a sort of human angel," he said returning it to her, "but I was longing for a drink, and I more than appreciate your thoughtfulness. I always felt I should know a nymph if I saw her—that like you, she would be all in brown, with a hint of wild roses in her cheeks and sunlight in her hair. Won't you sit down. Wood Nymph?" he added politely, spreading out his coat by the roadside.

"I—I mustn't," she replied, in the same soft voice, "because you see I don't know you and—"

"Oh, if that's all I can soon set you right," he responded gayly. "I'm Jack Raynor of the state highway department. I'm looking up the route for the new state road, and I was getting on pretty well until the Greyhound," indicating the car with a nod of his head, "picked up a couple of tacks. I was just cursing my luck when you came along to prove the truth of the old adage about the 'silver lining.' And I'd much prefer to have company while I repair damages."

The girl seated herself gracefully and watched him with interest as he took out his vulcanizing outfit, affixed a rubber patch, clamped it into place, and lighted the gasoline in the container. While he was waiting for it to burn out he sat down beside her.

"Now suppose you tell me about yourself. Of course I know you are a wood nymph, but even they must have names—otherwise there would be no end of confusion."

"There's nothing very interesting to tell," she replied quietly, her eyes fixed on the flame. "I'm Rose Carey, and father and I live in the brown house over there. He carries the mail, so I'm alone all day. He used to be a school principal, and then he developed tuberculosis and was ordered to stay out of doors, so we bought this little place and came here to live. With the mail route and the garden we get along. I had to give up high school, but he has taught me evenings. Mother died when I was a baby—there are just two of us—and I wouldn't for anything have him suspect I'm dissatisfied. In summer, with the flowers and berries and chickens, it's not so bad. But winters are lonesome—sometimes I just long to see the real world."

For a moment Jack Raynor was silent. Then, to hide the depth of his sympathy, he sprang up quickly and busied himself with the vulcanizer. "Wood Nymph," he inquired presently, "couldn't you be persuaded to have lunch with me? I brought a substantial one along, and it's only fair to share it with you, since you've supplied the drinks and dessert."

Then, taking her acceptance for granted, he fished out a large box from the rear of the car and deposited it beside her with the comment: "If you like you may set the table while I finish pumping up these tires." To them both the wayside meal was a delightful adventure, entered into wholeheartedly and in the spirit of comradeship. Jack Raynor found himself more and more impressed by the charm of his companion and she herself under his approving gaze grew momentarily more radiant. Her face lost its wistfulness and her brown eyes sparkled with fun. He was sorry when, the lunch hour over, she rose to go.

"It's been a wonderful party, Wood Nymph," he said smiling down at her. "I have you to thank for turning my bad luck into fortune—now that I know where you live perhaps you'll permit me to stop without the excuse of repairs. Meanwhile here are the fateful tacks to remember me by."

But even as he laughingly extended them a change came over the girl. She drew back with a little shudder and turned her head away. But the gesture was not quick enough to hide the tears in her brown eyes.

"Why, Wood Nymph," he cried in genuine concern, "what's the matter? Have I offended you? Surely you know that I didn't mean to—I—"

"It—it's not you, it's—oh, you'll never want to see me again when I tell you—I put those tacks in the road myself."

"You put them there?" he repeated wonderingly.

"Yes, because I—I wanted something to happen, because I was tired of seeing just the dust of the cars and never any of the people—I put the tacks there this morning when I came out after berries—then behind the bushes I waited—when your car came along I heard what you said and realized the damage I'd caused. I was frightened. First I thought I'd run away, but I wanted to make up a little for what I'd done—so I brought the water and the peaches. When you treated me so like a real friend—I—I couldn't bear to explain and spoil it all, but now," she added, miserably, "I can't let you go without confessing. I'm sorry about the tires, and," fumbling in her pocket, "I'd like to pay for them with my berry money, then I wouldn't feel quite so—so like—a bandit," she finished, helplessly.

"You poor little girl," he said gently. "Don't you realize I'm grateful to those very tacks for helping me to find you—and of course I can't accept your berry money. But I'll tell you what, you can make it up to the Greyhound, if you like, with your own society, say twenty miles per tack."

With relief he observed that the brown eyes were smiling again.

"You see," he went on, "there's a prospect of running the road through your father's land—naturally that would considerably increase its value. I'll be over to talk to him about it some evening soon, and we can arrange about the ride then. Is it a bargain?"

Brief as it was, the handclasp sent a thrill through his veins. With reluctance he released her slim brown fingers.

"Except that it wouldn't be playing fair, I'm mightily tempted to turn bandit myself and carry you off, but I warn you it will take more than tacks to keep me off this road in the future, and just by way of farewell," he said, climbing into the car—he knew he should kiss her in another moment if he didn't—"let me say that you've achieved your wish, Wood Nymph, something has happened, sure enough, but I'm afraid this time it's a puncture that can't be vulcanized."

Rose Carey watched the gray car until it was lost in the white dust of the road. Then, womanlike, because in her heart she knew the answer perfectly well, she said aloud: "I wonder what he meant by a 'puncture that can't be vulcanized?'"

Suffering Caused by War. The name "barbed-wire disease" is found by Bing and Vischer to have probably originated in Switzerland, and it applies to a very marked functional mental disorder. The symptoms, recognizable in most men confined more than six months behind barbed-wire fencing, are severe in about 10 per cent of all prisoners. Increased irritability appears first, followed by diminished power of concentration, and there is much complaint of loss of memory of persons and places. Insomnia is a secondary symptom. Some prisoners have diminished eyesight, many grow suspicious, all tend to pessimism, some reaching an extreme in several days at a time of speechless torpor. Forgetfulness of words is very striking.

Get the Drop. A certain stingy son of Erin, upon seeing another Irishman just going to drink a glass of whisky, exclaimed: "Hould on, Pat; let an old friend have a drop, the last taste in the war!"

His friend passed the glass, and the stingy one emptied it. Pat was naturally annoyed, and said: "Bedad, I thought you said you only wanted a drop!"

We may guess his feelings when he received the reply: "The drop I wanted was at the bottom."

Dr. Sanders' Book Receives Praise.

The November sixth issue of the "Journal of Education" contains the following review of Prof. Sanders' translation of "Jerusalem's Problems of the Secondary Teacher":

It would seem as though there were enough books on teaching by Americans and Englishmen without translations, but Professor Sanders and his publisher (Richard Badger, Boston), are amply justified by the character of the book which Prof. Sanders has translated.

It is not the first book, nor the first book in English that has skillfully magnified the social side of education, but we can recall no book that has so nobly striven for a clearer conception of the social function of the high school.

Dr. Jerusalem of the University of Vienna, has taught American school men the high significance which the new opportunities of Sociology offer as a method of interpreting secondary school problems.

Dr. Jerusalem clearly demonstrates that the problems of the secondary school are not to be solved by any superficial changes. The trouble is not a teacher's one; it is not a mere question of the curriculum, of supervision, of too many written examinations, nor of a broadening of the elective privilege. He shows forcefully that the clearly recognized aim of the secondary school can be attained only "by means of a thorough-going internal reconstruction."

The secondary school has young people at an age when they desire to take a manly, womanly, view of everything social, civic and economic. As a rule one-half of the students will never go to a college or to a normal school.

As society is constituted there is no place where young people from fourteen to eighteen years of age will get specific educational leadership in the consideration of social problems except in the secondary school.

However much of industrial advantage there may be in stressing the vocational phase of the high school there is a great advantage, to state it mildly, in placing adequate emphasis upon social and civic responsibility.

Young people are no more likely to make good husbands and wives, good fathers and mothers, good neighbors, good citizens without special training than they are to make good carpenters or good accountants without specific training therefore. Dr. Jerusalem is an idealist, who inspires his readers to believe that they can do what he suggests. He both excites the imagination and puts spurs to the will. His idealism is constructive instead of critical.

Dr. Jerusalem not only tells what should be done and what can be done: not only makes high school teachers believe that it can be done, but he leads them along the way that will make his ideal their real.

East Berlin Park Addition. Plans for the development of a park site at East Berlin, Adams county, were discussed at a meeting of officials of the Bureau of Municipalities of the Pennsylvania Department of Internal Affairs at Harrisburg and members of the borough council and other interested citizens at East Berlin. J. Herman Kniesly, chief of the Bureau of Municipalities, and B. A. Haldeman, town planning engineer of the bureau went to the borough where preliminary plans were discussed and later a trip was made through the proposed park.

The land which is being considered for park purposes is owned by John R. Kuhn, of East Berlin and includes a wooded section bordered by Conewago creek. Part of the stretch is outside the borough limits and should council decide to go through with the park idea, it would no doubt result in an enlargement of the borough's area for it is likely that the section would be taken into the borough.

The State officials were pleased with the park development idea and it was stated at Harrisburg that a report would be prepared by Mr. Haldeman and forwarded to Burgess Eugene Elgin.

However, before actual work on the development of plans can be done by the Bureau of Municipalities, it will be necessary for the East Berlin borough council to obtain possession of the proposed park plot either by gift or purchase or a lease obtained for a long period for under the law plots cannot be developed by the bureau for individuals.

James F. Woodward, Secretary of Internal Affairs, who is very much interested in the town development and park ideas let it be known that he will give every assistance possible to East Berlin officials in mapping out a park when ever the borough obtains possession of the plot and ready to proceed with its development.

Mr. Haldeman's report to Burgess Elgin will show the possibilities of developing the plot and the advantages a park will offer the community. Just what idea Mr. Kuhn has of disposing of the proposed park tract to the borough is not known, but this matter will be one for further discussion between the owner and the borough officials.

Army to Sell Rifle Periscopes.

The Ordnance Department is endeavoring to develop a market for approximately 100,000 rifle periscopes which have been declared surplus. The rifle periscope is a small mechanical device consisting of a mirror encased in a heavy tin covering to which is attached a short arm that fitted over the rifle bayonet.

The rifle periscope was used by the American soldiers when engaged in trench warfare in Europe. The periscopes were attached to the rifles of the men in the trenches, who holding them above the trench tops, could ascertain and follow the activities of the enemy.

Efforts are now being made by the Ordnance Department and the Office of the Director of Sales to interest novelty dealers and boys' organization in this article, as it is believed that the periscope would appeal to children as a toy, or to such organizations as "The Boy Scouts of America," to be used by their membership in field maneuvers.

Inquiries concerning these periscopes, or suggestions of uses which may be made of them, should be addressed either to the Ordnance Salvage Board, Seventh and B. Streets Northwest, Washington, D. C. or to the Ordnance and Ordnance Stores Section, Office of the Director of Sales, Munitions Building, Washington, D. C.

ARENDTSTVILLE.

Owing to the frequent heavy rains during the last three weeks the ground was too wet to do seeding and many of our farmers did not get all the wheat and rye seeded that they had intended and that will cause a considerable shortage in the amount of acreage sown in this locality, but the early sown grain fields in this section look excellent.

Last Saturday John A. Raffensperger shot a fawn colored rabbit. It was quite a curiosity and some of our old hunters said they had never seen one of such a bright color.

Owing to the increased business of our National Bank W. A. Raffensperger has been appointed assistant cashier to S. A. Skinner the cashier.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson Minter, of Abilene, Kan., are visiting among relatives here.

Mrs. J. W. Dickson, of Hanover, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Ella Yeatts, who has her home with her son-in-law, H. P. Mark, in this place.

Mrs. Wm. Warren and her daughter, Mrs. H. C. Raffensperger, were week end visitors among relatives in Harrisburg.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Mark are visiting relatives in Baltimore.

Among those from a distance who attended Mrs. Amos Minter's funeral last Thursday were her brothers, A. J. Grammer, of Newark, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Minter and daughter Grace, of Jersey City, N. J.; and G. R. Minter, of Merchantsville, N. J.; Misses Annie and Ellen Minter, and Mrs. J. M. Smiley, of Philadelphia; and quite a number of relatives and friends from Lancaster were here to attend the funeral of John Jacobs who died in Lancaster and was buried here last Thursday.

The funeral of Mrs. Christ Klepper held on Wednesday noon was largely attended by her relatives and many friends. Relatives from Mt. Holly Springs, Aspers and Spring Grove, Pa., were present.

IRON SPRINGS.

"Wa, down," a comedian in a colored regiment, was asked when he received his discharge if he would enlist in case of another war. His reply was: "Boy, if this man's country gets into another war they is gonna be two men missing—this nigger and the man what's chasing him."

GETTYSBURG TESTIMONY.

Home Proof Here, There and Everywhere.

When you see Doan's Kidney Pills recommended in this paper you most always find the recommender a Gettysburg resident. It's the same everywhere—in 3,800 towns in the U. S. Fifty thousand people publicly thank Doan's. What other kidney remedy can give this proof of merit, honesty and truth? Home testimony must be true or it could not be published here. Read this Gettysburg recommendation. Then insist on having Doan's. You will know what you are getting:

D. F. Arendt, Railroad St., Gettysburg, says: "I suffered with kidney trouble for some years. I had sharp pains across the small of my back and in my sides and had to get up often during the night. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and was greatly benefited."

LASTING RESULTS.

On February 14, 1916, Mr. Arendt said: "I never let a chance slip by to say a good word for Doan's Kidney Pills. I can now say the cure Doan's gave me has remained permanent. I know of no better kidney medicine." Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Arendt had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

INTO THE UNKNOWN

Adventurers Irresistibly Lured to Untraveled Paths.

Martin Johnson and His Wife, Setting Out for the South Sea Islands, Explain Yearning That Calls Them to the Jungle Land.

To perpetuate the work that Jack London commenced and to film the unexplored mysteries of the jungle land—that vast unknown bush country of the South Sea Islands; to bring back photographic records of the habits, customs and mannerisms of tribes of which no white man has any knowledge; to endanger their lives in the tropic heat; to rub elbows with natives who are afflicted with leprosy, elephantiasis and other dangerous forms of contagious disease. All these items mean nothing at all to Martin Johnson and his pretty wife, Osa, who will leave New York Monday for Australia prior to invading the vast bush country, the unexplored interiors of which no white man has ever seen, writes the New York Sun. "I am anxious to go to the South Sea Islands because it is the nearest place to paradise on God's earth," said Martin Johnson. "There are no strikes there, and it is a far safer place than in your little old New York. You may have Broadway if you like, but as for me I want to get away from your talk of 'Bolshevism' and everything that has anything to do with it at all. Pro or con it doesn't make any difference. And then again," Mr. Johnson continued, "there is the lure of discovering things no white man has seen. There is the great adventure about it. It is a yearning to get away from all this back here and be out in the great wild. It is the unfathomable unknown, the insoluble wilderness that lures me." For Mrs. Johnson, this represents her second trip to the bush country, and she probably is the first woman from the United States to achieve such a distinction. The morality of the natives of the South Sea Islands is eulogized by Mrs. Johnson, who deprecates the morality of the white people, declaring the former to be of a higher standard. "No man covets his neighbor's wife there," she said. "Only in one instance did I see the penalty that a woman paid for alienating the affections of another woman's husband. They hanged her to a tree and executed her by slashing her body. A man lives three years with a woman before he marries her. In the Solomon Islands. In all that time he is never permitted to meet her in the open or mention his name to her, or she to him. Their coming together is decreed by order of the chief. The man is told who his mate is to be and where he can find her. In the dead of night he goes to her. If they like each other they are married in three years. If not, then their children are given over to the unmarried bride's or bridegroom's parents."

WILL "MAKE GOOD"

Spirit That Animates the Returning Soldiers.

Men Who Gloriously Finished the Greatest War in History Have Now But One Idea: Their Country's Good.

The American soldier in the great war dedicated his life to the establishment of justice, freedom and democracy in the world. Analytical wise guys have been busy ever since America got into the war, furnishing cynical explanations of the American fighting man's impelling motive.

In spite of the complex arguments of the analytical psychologists who can understand anything but the simple sincerity of an honest man, the American soldier did fight in war for the establishment of those principles, and has every intention of working in peace for the preservation of that for which he fought.

I talked of the purposes of the American Legion with Colonel Roosevelt. In his conversation, as he explained them to me, the word "crystallization" occurred again and again.

"We want," he said, "to crystallize the spirit that made it possible for us to get into this war and to fight it as we did."

Do you realize, you who read this, what that spirit is that this organization wants to crystallize and preserve? I'll give you an example of it that I saw.

A shattered church in the Marne salient during the latter part of July: It was filled with freshly-wounded on stretchers. The shells were whining over and bursting about it. A slim, boyish, very boyish boy was brought in all shot to pieces. He was a very ordinary American boy, certainly not more than eighteen. A medical major was passing.

"Hey, doc," the young fellow called weakly.

"What is it, son?" the major asked, bending above him.

"Tell me, doc," the boy begged huskily. "Am I—am I—bad hit?"

The major looked at the descriptive slip with which the wounded boy was tagged and hesitated. He knew the young fellow had less than half an hour of life left in him.

"Well, I'll tell you, son," he said slowly. "You're in a pretty bad way, but we're going to do all we can for you."

The boy—who was a very ordinary young fellow, as I have said—saw the truth under the thin camouflage of kindness.

He knew he was dead. He caught his breath quickly, closed his eyes, and, reaching up, caught hold of the major's hand and held it tight for a little time.

Then he sighed, opened his eyes, and folded his arms contentedly on his breast. He looked up at the major, and there was the calm light of a glad resignation on his face.

"Well, anyhow," he whispered triumphantly, "I guess I made good, didn't I?"

THE ITALIAN FARMER.

The Italian farmer is evidently nothing if not willing to experiment. No fewer than three classes of collective farms are in successful operation in the country. In one class a co-operative society of farmers acts as landlord for the individual members, each of whom tills his own farm independently of the others. Under the second plan the co-operative society holds the land, decides from year to year how it is to be divided and cultivated, and appoints each member to his part in the program of cultivation. The third plan is more complicated: the co-operative society rents a large farm which is worked by a permanent staff of members receiving a salary for their services, and by other members who divide their time between work on the co-operative farm and on privately owned farms. All three forms of co-operation are highly successful according to recent accounts. They have this point in common, the elimination of middlemen between farmer and consumer.

Ivory "Mines."

Lieutenant Scheutze, who was a member of a United States naval expedition sent into the arctic in search of the exploration ship Jeannette, reports the discovery of ivory "mines" in a group of islands lying northeast of the Lena river, situated in northeast Siberia. Vast numbers of mammoths, it appears, have been discovered buried in a sea of ice, and it is held that for a short period each year, probably a few weeks, these mammoths could be "mined" with great profit, owing to the immensity of the tusks, four times the size of those of the elephant of this age, and because of the great value of ivory at present. An ivory "mining" expedition would doubtless furnish all the "thrill" that the most adventures could possibly desire.

Truly Times Have Changed.

A friend of Senator Sorghum encountered the solon on the steps of the capitol and after passing the time of day remarked playfully:

"Senator, how comes it you aren't making any of your famous speeches these days?"

But the senator was ready for him.

"Times have changed," he replied without hesitation. "Now it isn't at all easy for a man with silk hat and frock coat to assert he is saving the country all by himself, and say it at an audience that's all khaki uniforms and overalls."

FARBEWELCOMES ITS "FERDIE" FOCH

Here is pictured the "day of days" for Farber, France. It is the "homecoming" of the great allied military leader, General Foch. In the small town in southern France they waited many days for this great event, townspeople pride that such a great man should have been brought up amongst them. General Foch is standing on the steps of his home—his birthplace.

DEMOCRACY.

Mrs. George Bass, chairman of the Woman's Bureau, Democratic National Committee, returning to Washington recently after traveling thousands of miles through this country said:

"It is astonishing that the Republicans go into debate and appear on lecture platforms with nothing new to present to audiences anxious to hear about possible solutions of the pressing problems of the present day."

"When living, burning, vital issues belonging to the new era are at stake I have heard orators tell how the party founded on the ideals of Abraham Lincoln had freed the country of slavery, and I have waited in vain to learn that the record of recent years was worthy of that splendid achievement in the cause of Liberty. But none of the speakers came within a decade of the present stressful period of reconstruction."

"In one State a speaker solemnly declared that all the great men of the country have been Republicans. To this assertion, Mrs. Peter Olsen, the brilliant woman orator of Minnesota, replied that not every great man had belonged to the party that Abraham Lincoln had glorified and she enumerated the list of names brilliant in history, a wonderful list from Thomas Jefferson to Woodrow Wilson."

"The whole trend of Republican thought has been reactionary. Instead of facing the facts that must be recognized in this period of world reconstruction Republicans have evaded the most insistent questions."

"Before audiences of women it has not been safe to criticize the League of Nations, because no matter what their political affiliations may be, the mothers and wives of the nation support the solemn covenant framed with the object of preventing future wars."

"Progress never was attained by looking backward, except to glance just long enough to note mistakes. The looking backward of the Republicans takes no account of mistakes, to which parties as well as persons are liable. I admit that it requires courage to face the complex problems of the present day. The Democratic party has been put to the test as no party ever before has been tested, for it has been compelled to grapple with all the terrible problems and to meet the countless exigencies produced by the world war. It has made a record that comprises the most brilliant pages of United States history."

from our neighbors from a month to an hour. A vast amount of our civilization, and the daily improvements of life that come to our people, are the products of the ideas and intelligence and labor of our neighbors. If we believe we can see our neighbors return to another 30 years' war through the breakdown of this treaty, and we still maintain our progress it is the egotism of insanity."

The New York Times editorially comments on the shameful action of the United States Senate as to the treaty as follows:

The Lodge treaty of nullification has been killed. The Treaty of Versailles still lives, though passion and partisanship and the spirit of revenge have prevented, for this session of Congress at least, its ratification and acceptance by the United States. It will be put into effect by the other signatories, leaving this country without its benefits, standing before the world as the one nation that refuses to sanction measures for the prevention of war. We shall not long remain in that shameful position. The treaty must be called into existence. The United States must join the other nations in sanctioning the agreement reached at Versailles, in the league of peace."

As the hour for nullifying the President's work approached the splendid discipline of the Republican party asserted itself. The scruples and compunctions of the mild reservationists gave way, they put themselves altogether under the leadership of Mr. Lodge. The Senators of the "battalion of death" did not desert their party when they voted, thirteen of them, against the Lodge resolution and reservations. They voted to destroy the treaty, and that is precisely what the thirty-five Republicans who supported Mr. Lodge's treaty voted for. Forty-five Democrats, Mr. Hitchcock's entire band of loyal supporters, voted as the President desired, "against the Lodge resolution of nullification," hoping in that way to prepare the way for saving the Versailles Treaty."

The country will not for an instant be in doubt as to the responsibility. Who has supported the Treaty of Versailles from the moment of its submission to the Senate, who has toiled and striven for its ratification? Who has opposed ratification, who has piled Ossas, and Pelions of obstruction across its pathway, who has grafted upon it reservations that blast and destroy it? When we say who we mean which party. An observing people will judge, has judged. It has been a work of blind partisan recklessness, done in callous disregard of the need and the suffering of nations and of millions of men who will have to bear their burdens of conditions of peace, works of mercy and upbuilding can be undertaken. It is a fearful responsibility that the enemies of the treaty and of peace have taken upon themselves.

C. V. S. N. S. Notes.

Dr. J. L. Grimm addressed the joint meeting of the Y. M. & Y. W. C. A. last Sunday evening. He delivered an earnest and inspiring address.

The Normal School paid special attention to the recommendation of the National Educational Association, in regard to a crusade for better English. The members of the faculty co-operated in endeavoring to help the students improve in oral as well as written expressions.

The Sophomore class held a special election at which J. R. Moore was elected president and Wimbirt Neely of New Oxford, vice president.

The Halloween party is justly regarded as one of the most enjoyable events of the school year. The attendance at the party held Saturday evening, Nov. 1, was very large. The customs were probably not quite so elaborate as on former occasions, but they showed much originality and exhibited every possible variety of dress. Hobes mingled with fairies and crowned heads. The ghosts were not so numerous as usual but the dimmed lights gave the grand march a rather spectral appearance. The faculty committee consisting of Prof. Heiges, Miss Harris, and Mrs. Lehman did not have an easy task in deciding to whom to award the prize for originality and effectiveness in costume. They finally agreed to award one prize to Misses Rebek and Britton who appeared as "Hiram and Miranda" and another to Miss Sara Hess who appeared in the costume of Scotch lassie.

The first football team played the Base Hospital 31, of Carlisle with a score of 26 to 7 in the Normal School's favor. A number of the Normal boys went to Carlisle to see the game. The following from Adams county went: Messrs. Clifton Fickel, of York Springs; Albert Baker, of Fairfield; Roy Hull, of McKnightstown; Leslie Stock, of New Oxford, and George Wortz, of Fairfield.

Quite a number of the students of Adams county spent the week end at their homes in the various parts of the county.

Tuberculosis Days December 5, 6, 7.

In a statement Governor Sprout suggests that the residents of Pennsylvania join other States in observing tuberculosis day in December in connection with the Christmas seal sale.

The dates named are Friday, December 5th, as tuberculosis day in the schools, Saturday, Dec. 6, as tuberculosis day in the synagogues and Sunday, Dec. 7, as tuberculosis day in the churches.

Governor Sprout has bought the first health bond in the seal campaign. He thus has become the first member of the Keystone Health Bond Club. The Health Bond is a new feature in the seal campaigns. It is sold to a person who wants to aid the health and tuberculosis work in a substantial way and does not care for the large number of seals his donation would buy. Health Bonds run in denominations from $5 to $100.

Dr. Thomas E. Finegan, State Commissioner of Education, is sending a letter to the 44,000 public school teachers in the State calling attention to the seal and tuberculosis campaign and asking them to bring the matter to the attention of their pupils on tuberculosis day. The day will also be properly observed in parochial schools and the colleges.

Pastors all over the State have already given assurance that they will preach Dec. 7 on the white plague and the public health problem. The matter will likewise be brought to the attention of many Sunday Schools on that day. Many State mayors will back up the Governor by asking their citizens to join in marking tuberculosis day, which will be observed throughout the country.

He had just risen from a chair in the restaurant and was preparing to leave when he suddenly fell, face downward on the floor. A physician was summoned at once and pronounced death to be instantaneous. The cause is not definitely known, but it is supposed that death was due to the effect of over-exertion. Ryde's Egg Mash

"Makes Them Lay"

That's what you want at the price of eggs to-day. Makes every hen a payer by producing eggs nearly all the time instead of about half the time. Eggs is a question of feed. Give hens egg-producing feed and they will produce the eggs. No feed, or the wrong kind of feed, means no eggs.

Ryde's Egg Mash

is an unequalled egg producer, containing animal and vegetable nutrition in the correct proportions to produce results. No guess work or experimenting on the part of the feeder. The increased egg yield overcomes the cost of the mash.

More Eggs, Better Eggs, Bigger Eggs

Try a bag to-day on those hens that are backward and you will be more than pleased with the results.

Ryde's Cream Calf Meal

is the best substitute for milk in feeding all young stock. It supplies them with all the food value found in whole milk in just as digestible a form and in the correct proportions. It does them just as much good as whole milk and you save more than half the feed bill. Every pound makes one gallon of gruel, or rich, nutritious, perfect milk substitute. You take no chances.

PARENT-TEACHERS MEET

INCREASED INTEREST IN WORK SHOWN BY LARGE ATTENDANCE

Mrs. S. N. Hagen, President for the New Year—Community Recreation and Health Messages.

The Parent-Teachers' Association met on last Friday evening and the room at the High School was filled, indicative of the great interest in this association. All meetings since the end of the war have been largely attended and the interest in the work of this organization is on the increase.

Mrs. S. N. Hagen was elected president, Mrs. William C. Gilbert vice president, Miss Annie Major, secretary, Mrs. Harry Geiselman, financial secretary, and C. A. Heiges, treasurer.

The musical part of the evening's program was furnished by the High School Orchestra, pupils of the fifth grade of the High Street building, who sang four folk songs, and the vocal solos by Miss Borge, music instructor of the town schools. Miss Lily Dougherty recited "How to Manage a Husband," and responded to enthusiastic encores. Mrs. Emory J. Plank, Mrs. Harry Geiselman and Mrs. Harry Culp reported visits to the schools.

The speakers of the evening were Rev. Pontius and Arthur M. Dewees, executive secretary of the State Red Cross X-mas seal sale. Rev. Pontius spoke on "Community Recreation" and urged the support of the Kurtz Playground and next year's program. "Since the Civil War fifteen years has been added to the life of a human being and physicians believe that fifteen additional years can be added now that the saloon is gone. We must have something to replace the saloon."

"The playground," he said, "is democratic, that is one of its best points. The Ward League baseball games brought the people of Gettysburg together more than any other one interest has done." He outlined some of the plans for the coming year and urged the Parent-Teachers' Association to support the project. Before closing he criticized the Gettysburg parents who would rather have their children play in their own back yards than get out and mix with other boys and girls.

Mr. Dewees spoke on subject of "Health for All," and among other things said: One of the most important features of the peace time program of the Red Cross is its health crusade. He told of the origin of the Christmas seal and that it represented the fight against the great white plague which each year was taking off thousands of boys and girls. He emphasized the points that the fight was not in vain for it was a disease that would be stamped out. He urged the members of the Parent-Teachers' Association to help the Adams county committee in the sale of the little messengers of good health.

The following committees were appointed: Visiting, Dr. S. N. Hagen, Emory Plank, George Black, Roy Zinn, Rev. F. H. Brunstetter and Charles Hartzell; Program, Rev. Paul R. Pontius, Misses Lily Dougherty and Maude Miller. The home and school attendance banners were won by the Freshman class in the High School, the Seventh Grade in the Meade School and Miss Hattie Magraw's room in the High Street building.

Small Majorities in York County.

The official count of the vote of York county has been completed and Jonathan B. Gross, Democratic candidate for sheriff, retains his lead of twelve votes over D. Guy Hollinger, the Republican candidate. Never in the history of York county has a candidate for the office of sheriff won over his opponent by the margin of twelve votes. The count determines John Henry Lanier, Democrat, to be the minority member of the poor board, with a lead of 73 votes over Charles E. Frey, the other Democratic candidate. The poor board will therefore have two Republicans and one Democrat. W. H. Snyder, prothonotary-elect, has a plurality of only 57 votes over Warren J. Rafenberger, Democrat. Lewis C. Elliott, Republican, wins the city treasurer'ship over Dr. S. K. Pfaltzgraff, Democrat, by 128 votes. The official count made no changes in the results as previously announced.

Clean White Rags Wanted at this Office

Down Falvy Way

By WILL T. AMES

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Ho, sheriff, this is Barton. You're needed down Falvy way. They been trying to get you on the phone, but the damned line's busted or something. Come down and I'll tell you about it."

"All right; be there in a minute." And the head of Deputy Sheriff Cal Nestor disappeared from the moonlit upstairs window. Three minutes later he opened the side door.

"Come in, Bart," said the sheriff. "What's broke loose at Falvy?"

"Oh, that half-baked Dubreese boy, the second oldest of the tribe, you know—works in the pulp board mill, when he works at all—"

"I know him," cut in Nestor.

"Well, he's suffering from a mixture of hard cider and Wild Bill nickel novels, and he's got an ingrown notion that it's up to him to be a bad man like he's been reading about. He had some sort of a jangle with an inoffensive little cuss from Peterboro—something about taking his job away from him—and this afternoon he brought the Peterboro fellow a swipe with a light crowbar that almighty near done his business for him. Then he run home and got together a regular damned arsenal he owns—a thirty-three rifle and a repeater shotgun and a revolver and a joblot of shells and set out for the woods. Stopped some kids and told 'em to go serve notice on the world for him that he was right dangerous and not to be took alive."

"Then he slid into the thickets up back of where he lives—and the whole town has been out after him ever since six o'clock. There ain't any head to the chase, though, and the two constables over to Falvy, if you ask me, is scared of the cuss. I was driving through from West Liberty and stopped to see the doings. The constantly met an old man, who, in his youth, had heard Daniel Webster, who remembered and could quote much of that great man's utterances. The day has gone by for any such efforts of memory. The orator of today does not feel that he is "delivering the goods" unless he is rattling off two hundred words a minute, a rapidity that puts it beyond the power of the hearer to remember anything but the idea sought to be conveyed, and that too often not any too clearly. The great Daniel spoke with impressive deliberateness, for when he spoke he really had something to say and his speed was not above 120 words a minute. He would have been considered "easy" today, even by a stenographic beginner.

Webster was born at Salisbury, N. H., January 18, 1872. His most remarkable efforts were his speeches in the senate on the Greek revolution, and in his debate with Hayne of South Carolina. He also acquired great fame by two orations—one at the laying of the corner stone of the Bunker Hill monument, on the anniversary of the battle, June 17, 1825, and the other on the completion of the monument, in 1843. One of his greatest utterances, which may be looked upon as a prophecy of the conflict that came near to the destruction of the Union, may be cited as the best remembered of his utterances: "When my eyes shall be turned to behold for the last time the sun in heaven, may I not see him shining on the broken and dishonored fragments of a once glorious Union; on states dissolved, discordant, belligerent; on a land rent with civil feuds, or drenched, it may be, in fraternal blood."

TERRORS OF WARS OF OLD

Doubtful If Battles of Today Make Greater Demands on Courage Than in Ancient Times.

Much is written of the terrors of modern war. Little is written of the terrors of the wars of old. Yet it is doubtful if war today makes greater demands on human courage than war in the time of Grant, of Washington, of Turenne, of Caesar, of Alexander. Consider a stand-up infantry fight in the days of the revolution. After the preliminary cannonade and long-distance musketry practice, the two regiments marched toward each other in closed ranks. At a given distance, frequently at 30 yards, there was a halt, a smashing volley, and then a bayonet charge through the smoke. Bullets those days were large and of solid lead, and the man who was hit went down. Over him tramped his comrades and the enemy, shooting and stabbing.

That was the type of infantry battles for 150 years. To minimize the courage needed to make a good soldier under such circumstances is to fly in the face of common sense.

Modern war requires a different type of courage from that needed of old. The old touch of elbows is lacking. The old feeling of companionship is gone. The modern soldier must be more alert, better taught, keener witted than the olden soldier of equal valor. But it does not follow that the modern soldier is the braver man.

The men who fought at the "bloody angles" of Chickamauga and Spotsylvania, at Bunker Hill and Oriskany, at Rivoli, Zorndorf and Malplaquet, had no need to learn heroism in any modern school. It was theirs already.

White Staff of Life.

The physicians have a way of balancing the good against the bad that endears them to the general public. They have enabled us to worry over countless new diseases by discovering new germs that our forefathers wot not of. Their benevolent activity sometimes makes us uncomfortable. But, on the other hand, they reassure us in other matters. Especially are they inclined to hold nowadays that the appetite is an excellent guide as to what one should eat. And as long as we are allowed to eat what we like we are able to reconcile ourselves to lesser ills. An editorial in the current Journal of the American Medical association gives us back white bread, stamped with its approval. Welcome gift! When the physicians tell us to follow our natural inclinations at the table, we are bound to admit that we forget all the grievances we may have secretly cherished against them.

Dachshund Disappearing.

The dachshund three feet long in reality and six or more in the eyes of the caricaturist, is slowly but surely disappearing from the pavements and from the pages of the comic papers in Berlin. The new style of Viennese cafe, into which no dogs are admitted, is against him, and, of late, is the fashion, which calls for constantly increasing force for Russian wellbourned and toy dogs.

"But, the greatest enemy of the dachshund is the dog tax," says the Berlin correspondent of The London Telegraph. "This year the tax was raised from 20 shillings to 30 shillings ($5 to $7.50). The result is that in Berlin the number of these dogs has diminished by 4,500 in the course of the twelve months. In contrast the number of dogs free of tax obligation has increased, and is now 6,600, as against 35,000 paying the 20 shillings. Among the dogs paying no duty are forty-six police dogs."

Hawaiian Republic.

Hawaii was proclaimed a republic July 4, 1894. More than a year before Queen Liliuokalani had been deposed by a committee of public safety because of her attempt, it was asserted, to obtain more absolute power. A provisional government was set up, which lasted till the islands were proclaimed a republic. Sanford B. Dole, former head of the provisional government, became president. Unsuccessful attempts had been made to conclude a treaty of annexation with the United States. The islands were finally annexed July 7, 1898, as a war measure, the United States being then at war with Spain. They were organized a territory June 14, 1900. Ex-President Dole was appointed governor by President McKinley.

MADE IT PERCENTAGE JOB

Old Mose Was Working Along New Lines Which Were Entirely Satisfactory to Him.

The old-time negro who used to take off his hat and say "massa," is learning modern methods. In the old days, Mose used to do chores and if he received a dollar or a sack of potatoes, he was tickled to death.

Nowadays it's different. Mose works on schedule. The other day Mrs. Brown hired him to clear off a few pieces of furniture. It was a job that would have taken a white man an hour or so, but Mose spent three days at it, coming and going as he pleased. Finally he declared the job done, and presented a bill for $3.50.

"Why Mose," cried Mrs. Brown. "Isn't this a little high? The job really wasn't worth even a dollar."

"No, ma'am," said Mose. "It ain't high. Ise working on percentage now, like a white man."

"Percentage? What do you mean?"

"Well, ma'am, I figures this way: Yoah library's worth about $350. Ise charged only one percentage for handling it. In the newspapers it says white men handles furniture for 5 and 10 per cent, so I reckon Ise dirt cheap."

"Sure thing. Falvy hasn't had so much excitement since the minister's little boy swallowed his mother's wedding ring. Well, so-long."

"Good-night, Bart."

Sheriff Nestor's thoughts were not on young Dubreese and his melodramatic foolishness as he drove his little car over the moonlit roads to Falvy. Nothing but the line of duty could have dragged him to Falvy at this particular time—and yet in no other direction did his inclination so powerfully draw him. For Mary Nestor was in Falvy, in her capacity of trained nurse, taking care of old man Falvy, the mill owner. She had left her husband, the sheriff, a week ago.

It was a case of the conflict of strong personalities, together with a mistaken viewpoint on the part of the man for the rights and liberties of the woman. It had been brewing for months.

The final clash had come over a slight, immaterial thing—and Mary had gone out, white-faced but courageous and all-apparent calmness, to earn her own living. After a week Cal Nestor would have given his right hand to have her back again. In his stiff-necked pride he would have given the left one rather than let her know it. But tonight he wondered whether, in Falvy, he might not see her.

Nestor found the mill hamlet of Falvy wide-awake and all its able-bodied males afield, men-hunting. The sheriff, taking command, deployed his forces for a drive, fan-wise, through the half-mile of thickets in which Dubreese presumably was hiding—leaving unguarded all rear approach to his home.

"By this time he'll be hungry and losing some of his spunk and want some of that stone-fence cider; we'll let him sneak home, and then get him," Nestor told Phillips, the constable.

Even so. At 5:30 in the morning came running one of the youths set to watch the Dubreese house. "He just snook it over the pasture fence, sheriff," reported the excited lad.

"All right; I'll go have a talk with him."

"By hooky, sheriff, you'd better be careful. He's a damned bad egg," advised Phillips. But Nestor laughed.

In the broad light of the summer morning, Sheriff Nestor unlatched the rickety Dubreese gate in a most casual way and started up the dirt path to the side door. He had taken not more than four steps when the door flew open and young Dubreese, white, shaking, wild-eyed, victim of a very panic of desperation, stood on the sill with a shotgun at the "ready."

"By goshamighty, Cal Nestor, don't you dast to step a foot nearer or I'll send you to hell a-kinin'!" he squeaked, his voice quavering with excitement.

"Oh, I guess you wouldn't do anything as foolish as that, Dubreese."

Nestor's reply was so easy as to be scarcely argumentative. Without show of arms, without the faintest sign of fear, he continued his approach. It should have worked; with any normal man it would have worked. But Dubreese was not a normal man. The gun roared—both barrels. And big, rugged Cal Nestor, without a sound, crumpled into a heap on the ground.

"Anyone else? Come on, the hull got-dummed world 'n gitt yours!" yelled the lunatic, ramming home two more shells. "Come inside that gate and go to hell a-lying!"

Of ten men of the posse in the roadway not one moved—toward the gate. But from across the way, where, sheltered by some alder growth, she had been watching in fear and trembling, a woman rushed, brushing away restraining hands. As she tore open the gate the madman threw the gun to his shoulder, but, heedless of him as of the others, she sped up the path and threw herself on her knees beside the fallen man. Then she gathered him in her arms, and with the strength of two men, carried him away to safety.

At the end of a feverish half-hour, Mary Nestor had beaten fate. When Doctor Holt, back from a country call, arrived at last, he said no one but a thoroughly trained and resourceful nurse could have saved the sheriff's life.

What happened then? Goodness me! What a question! What could happen? Did you ever—in this world—know of a woman saving her husband's life at the imminent hazard of her own—and then going away and leaving him, or having occasion to? Indeed, no.

"Anybody caught sight of Dubreese since he took to the woods?" inquired the sheriff.

"Three or four. But nobody with backbone enough to get him. That shooting gallery outfit of his seems to be a great antidote for Falvy valor. Far as that goes, I got a peek at him as I came up through the edge of the woods this side of Falvy, and somehow I didn't seem to take any very keen interest in getting into an argument with him. I came right along without stopping. Well, I got to be moseying along. Going down there?"

"Of course. I'll get there by one o'clock. They're all up for the night, I suppose?"

WEBSTER A GREAT ORATOR

He Spoke With Impassive Deliberateness and Really Had Something to Say.

A few years ago one might occasionally meet an old man, who, in his youth, had heard Daniel Webster, who remembered and could quote much of that great man's utterances. The day has gone by for any such efforts of memory. The orator of today does not feel that he is "delivering the goods" unless he is rattling off two hundred words a minute, a rapidity that puts it beyond the power of the hearer to remember anything but the idea sought to be conveyed, and that too often not any too clearly. The great Daniel spoke with impressive deliberateness, for when he spoke he really had something to say and his speed was not above 120 words a minute. He would have been considered "easy" today, even by a stenographic beginner.

Webster was born at Salisbury, N. H., January 18, 1872. His most remarkable efforts were his speeches in the senate on the Greek revolution, and in his debate with Hayne of South Carolina. He also acquired great fame by two orations—one at the laying of the corner stone of the Bunker Hill monument, on the anniversary of the battle, June 17, 1825, and the other on the completion of the monument, in 1843. One of his greatest utterances, which may be looked upon as a prophecy of the conflict that came near to the destruction of the Union, may be cited as the best remembered of his utterances: "When my eyes shall be turned to behold for the last time the sun in heaven, may I not see him shining on the broken and dishonored fragments of a once glorious Union; on states dissolved, discordant, belligerent; on a land rent with civil feuds, or drenched, it may be, in fraternal blood."

TERRORS OF WARS OF OLD

Doubtful If Battles of Today Make Greater Demands on Courage Than in Ancient Times.

Much is written of the terrors of modern war. Little is written of the terrors of the wars of old. Yet it is doubtful if war today makes greater demands on human courage than war in the time of Grant, of Washington, of Turenne, of Caesar, of Alexander. Consider a stand-up infantry fight in the days of the revolution. After the preliminary cannonade and long-distance musketry practice, the two regiments marched toward each other in closed ranks. At a given distance, frequently at 30 yards, there was a halt, a smashing volley, and then a bayonet charge through the smoke. Bullets those days were large and of solid lead, and the man who was hit went down. Over him tramped his comrades and the enemy, shooting and stabbing.

That was the type of infantry battles for 150 years. To minimize the courage needed to make a good soldier under such circumstances is to fly in the face of common sense.

Modern war requires a different type of courage from that needed of old. The old touch of elbows is lacking. The old feeling of companionship is gone. The modern soldier must be more alert, better taught, keener witted than the olden soldier of equal valor. But it does not follow that the modern soldier is the braver man.

The men who fought at the "bloody angles" of Chickamauga and Spotsylvania, at Bunker Hill and Oriskany, at Rivoli, Zorndorf and Malplaquet, had no need to learn heroism in any modern school. It was theirs already.

NOT MEANT FOR CIRCULATION

Volumes in Ancient Library of Alexandria, Egypt, Were Not Infrequently 150 Feet Long.

How would you like to have to read a story written on a sheet of paper 150 feet long?

This task faced those who made use of the famous library at Alexandria, for the universal writing material in that day was papyrus, parchment not coming into use until three centuries later. This collection contained 400,000 books, and when it was burned treasures of the literature and history of ancient days beyond all price were lost. The library was destroyed by accident when flames spread to the shore from the fleet which Caesar had set on fire.

The reed, from the inner covering of which papyrus was made, still grows in Egyptian marshes. Thin strips of it were cut off and laid close together. A sheet was formed by laying strips across these at right angles, after which the material was moistened, pressed and dried. The paper thus made had a fair writing surface, but was not very durable. Unless handled with extreme care papyrus scrolls found nowadays will crumble into dust. The sheets, sometimes made 150 feet long, were called "biblos," from which the modern Bible and book are derived. The ink used was made of gum and lampblack. Papyrus was not only used in Egypt, but a large amount of it was exported. Excavations in the ruins of Herculaneum have brought to light many thousands of these scrolls.

John Boyle O'Reilly.
 An Irish-American poet and journalist, born at South Castle, County Louth, Ireland, June 23, 1841, John Boyle O'Reilly rose rapidly in his career and came to be beloved for his earnestness of purpose and his human interest which he interwove into his writings. At the age of eighteen he went to London as an agent of the Fenian society, and later was sentenced to be shot by the British government, but this sentence was commuted to penal servitude for 20 years. O'Reilly escaped from western Australia, was rescued by an American whaler and carried to the United States. He settled in Boston and devoted his talents to literary work and public activity, and died August 10, 1890.

The Yosemite Valley.
 Geologists have determined, by unerring fact, that the river did by far the most of the work of forming the Yosemite gorge and that the great glacier which followed the water ages afterwards did little more than square its corners and steepen its cliffs. It may have increased the depth from 700 to 1,000 feet, and more. During the uncountable years since the glaciers vanished erosion has again marvelously used its wonder chisel. With the lessening of the Merced's volume the effect was no longer to deepen the channel but to amazingly carve and decorate the walls.

Stories of Longfellow.
 A Massachusetts paper has this reminiscence of the poet Longfellow, a story which he related himself: "One of the many visitors who came to his house rushed up to him with the exclamation, 'Mr. Longfellow, I have long desired the honor of knowing you, sir. I am one of the few men who have read your 'Evangeline.' And another minor bard who was visiting him, noticing the handsome trees: 'I love trees,' condescendingly. In telling of this incident Mr. Longfellow remarked, 'It was as if the man gave a certificate to all the neighboring vegetation.' An English visitor, without letters of introduction, gave the following embarrassed excuse for his visit: 'Is this Mr. Longfellow? Well, sir, as you have no ruins in your country I thought—I thought—I would call to see you.'"

Wouldn't Do at All.
 Gerry had an unreasonable fear of dogs. Thinking to cure him of this his father decided to get one for him. Gerry didn't much like the idea, but nevertheless he was greatly excited when his father telephoned the new pet would arrive at noon. Visions of the butcher's collier that had tried to scrape acquaintance with him, and of the Newfoundland puppy belonging to a cousin filled his mind, so that when his father arrived Gerry nearly fell headlong down the stairs in his eagerness to see his new playmate. When his father produced from a small basket a stubby-tailed Boston bull, Gerry eyed it fearfully, then said with a poof, "That ain't no kind of a dawg to have, how'm I gonna tell when he ain't gonna bite? I want a dawg with a long wag."

Gipsy Vocabulary.
 Some curious and interesting information regarding gipsies is to be found in an old book dated 1816. It mentions a report freely circulated at that time, that a member of the English parliament had stated to the house of commons that there were no less than 36,000 gipsies in Great Britain. It gives a vocabulary of many of their words. They call the sun "chum," the moon "chun," bread and butter "kalmaro," drink "levin dag jukon," beer "limbar," old day "shil dewes," silver "dupe," hot day "tal dewes," and night "raut." At that time, it is stated, not one gipsy in a thousand could read.

Rat Plague in England.
 Brown rats are increasing so rapidly in rural England that they have become a plague and the board of agriculture is preparing for a campaign against the rapacious rodent. Immense loss of wheat has been caused by the rats. In some districts unthreshed stacks have been riddled with rat runs and are almost fallen in. It is estimated that a grown rat can eat two ounces of wheat a day and spoil much more.

Its Fate.
 "Sometimes I am tempted to believe that as far as dignity is concerned, legislative bodies have not a rag left." "Oh, yes, they have; they're chewing it."

Written by Famous King.
 A letter bearing what is believed to be the only authentic signature of King Ferdinand of Spain—co-patron with Queen Isabella of the expedition of Columbus to the new world—that is extant in this country, forms one of the most important additions to the collections of the Historical society of New Mexico. The letter is written to his cousin, the duke of Infantazco. The document, which is dated Dec. 28, 1512, is remarkably well preserved. It deals with the arrangements for the approaching marriage of the king's niece and the duke's son. The letter concludes: "Everything is already prepared for the wedding, including the money which is to be given the said court as agreed." The signature affixed is Ferdinand's famous "Yo. El Rey (I, the King)."

Flower Legends.
 Human blood and tears are well known legendary sources of plants and flowers. Among the ancient Greeks such legends were common. The anemone, for example, was said to have sprung from the tears Venus shed over the death of Adonis.

A CHAMPION RUNS FOR COUNCIL

This is Johnny Kilbane, champion featherweight boxer of the world. He is not showing you blows that he uses in defending his title by "knocking his opponents" cold. No indeed, Kilbane is running for council in Cleveland—and if elected—says he will never fight again but will retire—undefeated.

Among the Virginia tribes of Indians red clover was supposed to have sprung from the blood of red men slain in battle with the white invaders.

According to tradition, the Danish invasion was the cause of the Daneweed, a coarse asteraceous plant common in England, as it sprang from the blood of Danes slain in battle. If cut on a certain day in the year, the country people say, it bleeds.

Quackery Sometimes Effective.
 "Faith and foolishness will cure any disease," says the cynic, and judging by some instances of miraculous whole-sale cures, there seems to be some ground for the assertion.

There is the historical episode of the prince of Orange, for instance, who during one of his campaigns, cured those of his soldiers who were dying of the scurvy by a piece of quackery.

With his doctors, who were in the secret, he said he had procured a medicine—really a decoction of camomile, wormwood and camphor—of the greatest rarity and value from the East. It was so strong that two or three drops would impart a healing virtue to a gallon of water. The men took the medicine with faith and cheerful faces, and so historians tell us, grew well rapidly.

The New Version.
 "Gabe Gosnell got bunced good and plenty on his trip," related Burt Blunt of Petunia.

"Aw, well," returned old Riley Rosadew, "a fool and his money go to Kansas City."—Kansas City Star.

Did you ever hear that short little poem which ends,

"You are late.

You've missed your date,

Fool, I'm Time,

I never wait?"

And if you have heard it before, did it ever occur to you, how costly waiting policies on the part of a great store could be to you—the public? If we were to be hesitant, slow to assume great responsibilities, slow to grasp golden opportunities, slow to be generous in extending shares of our gains, then there would never have been built the business we enjoy. The ideals of a store, like the ideals of a man, become imbedded in the nature of the being, and they continue, strong, undefeated throughout the ages. This, then, is a good thing to remember in selecting a place to trade. The institution which has carried through the years the burden of serving you in a helpful, beneficial way, always willing to satisfy you at all costs, will retain that policy, that ideal for ever. Be satisfied in every shopping trip you make, never know the discouragement of disappointment in merchandise, by pinning your faith to this store.

No matter what character of goods you desire—we are likely ready for you if it is generally stocked on a Dry Goods Store.

ENDED IDOLATRY IN HAWAII

Brave Act of Kapiolani, Daughter of Chief, Resulted in Establishing Christianity There.

No longer do the fire lakes in the great crater of Kilauea carry terror to the soul of Hawaii as a message from the dreaded fire god, Pele. It is a century since Kapiolani, daughter of Keewimanihi, high chief of the district of Hilo, and wife of Nathe, high chief of Kona, and the national orator, defied the fire goddess, and turned her people from the idolatry. Prior to that time the superstition ran that whenever Pele stamped her foot on the bottom of the volcano Mauna Loa, her "House of Everlasting Fire," there were earthquakes. If she became angered with hapless lovers, or any who failed to worship her, she was credited with pouring out torrents of lava and liquid flame. All who went near the crater were expected to do so with humility and sacrifice, and high priests of the goddess kept the people in awe. People gave their dead to the volcano, hoping they would become ghost gods to aid them. Then Kapiolani, in 1820, after three years teaching at the feet of missionaries, accepted Christianity, and did what is recorded as one of the greatest acts of moral courage ever performed. She visited the volcano against the advice of her husband and friends, and hurled stones into the pit, and ate of the enchanted berries near it. She defied the goddess. Before going up she left a message, saying that if she didn't return, her people should continue to worship Pele, but if she did they should accept the new teachings. Her return safely banished the hold of idolatry in Hawaii.

FIRST POST SERVICE CRUDE

That Between New York and Boston, However, Was the Beginning of Great System.

The first regular postal service between two American cities was established December 10, 1872, when the government of New York inaugurated a regular monthly post to Boston.

Some thirty-three years before that a post office had been opened in Boston at the house of Richard Fairbanks, "for letters which are brought from beyond the seas, or are to be sent thither."

In 1657 the Virginia assembly provided for the "rapid transmission" of official communications from plantation to plantation on penalty of one hoghead of tobacco for each default. Four years after the establishment of the New York-Boston monthly mail, the colonial court of Massachusetts founded an official postoffice in Boston, with John Heyward as postmaster.

The first parliamentary act for the establishment of a postal system in the English-American colonies was passed in 1692, and a royal patent was granted Thomas Neale, who was authorized to transport "letters at such rates" as the planters should agree to give. Neale began operations in Virginia, and the other colonies soon joined in the movement, although the system was very imperfect.

Whale's Breathing Apparatus.

An eminent naturalist says concerning the breathing apparatus of the whale: "The windpipe does not communicate with the mouth; a hole is, as it were, bored right through the back of the head. Engineers would do well to copy the action of the valve of the whale's blow-hole; a more perfect piece of structure it is impossible to imagine. Day and night, asleep or awake, the whale works its breathing apparatus in such a manner that not a drop of water ever gets down into the lungs. Again, the whale must of necessity stay a much longer period under water than seals; this alone might possibly drown it, inasmuch as the lungs cannot have access to fresh air. We find that this difficulty has been anticipated and obviated by a peculiar reservoir in the venous system, which reservoir is situated at the back of the lungs."

Insist on Facts.

When you have lived your life long enough and consistent enough there will be no occasion to question your standing. Each year added to its predecessors with the same consistent goal adds to the stability of character that makes character for the community. Such lives unconsciously stamp themselves upon everyone they touch, and the world is made better in consequence. It's the hope of the future that there will arise a class of men who will take nothing for granted—who will seek bed-rock facts for every new venture. There will come the days when our civilization will be founded on truth and the results attained will abide. You can be one of these framers of the new age if you want to. Lend your aid in making the world better and its people happier. Teach people not to take things for granted.—Grit.

Animals Worth Owning.

A performing animal often has a greater earning capacity than a successful man of business. The first kangaroo to enter the boxing ring in America earned a sum in five years that allowed himself and his owner to retire from the limelight and spend the rest of their lives in peace and quiet. This was the first of a long line of p-f-fistic kangaroos who "made" their masters. Much of the success of Hagenbeck's Wonder Zoo at Olympia a few years back was undoubtedly due to the engagement of Max and Moritz, the "human apes."

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

United States Sex Statistics.

The census of 1910 showed 2,691,973 more males than females in the United States. In all but Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina and the District of Columbia, the males are in excess. In all the world females are a little in excess. The reverse in America is evidently due to the excess in male immigration.

Breaking It Gently.

"You were discharged?"

"No, indeed!"

"But you lost your job."

"It happened this way: The boss informed me in the kindest possible manner that there would be no limit set for my vacation this year."

Famous Women.

The comedy—that was felicitously presented a season ago written around the life of George Sand, was scarcely air to her, though highly entertaining. George Sand, the genius, had her cities, but she had a great brain. In her veins was the blood of kings and queens, so, naturally, she was highly dramatic and gathered into her category of passions the names of famous men of her time—the blazing epoch of genius, when Hugo, Balzac, De Musset, Dumas were at their zenith. Chopin, Berlioz and De Musset were George Sand's adores. Her real name was Alexandrine Lucile Aurore, Baroness Dudevant. As the author of "Consuelo," "Lola," "Valentine," she has a sure place in the hall of fame. Her morals could bear reproach; she seemed to exact and excite love without loving. That she turned her varied amatory experiences into "copy" may or may not be true. That she was an inspiration to gifted men is an established fact. The perfect Nocturnes of Chopin arose in large measure from his sorrows and joys with George Sand. She made $10,000 by her writings.

Gastronomic Animals.

One occasionally hears the question: "Is it Welsh rabbit or Welsh rabbit?" It is Welsh rabbit. "Rabbit" is only an altered form of the "rabbit," an afterthought intended to stimulate an absurd derivation from "rare" and "bit," as the Century dictionary characterizes it. "Welsh rabbit" itself is "genuine slang" and belongs to the class of names of jocular origin. There are many others: an Essex lion is a calf; a Fieldlane duck is a baked sheep's head; Glasgow magistrates or Norfolk capons are red herrings; Irish apricots or Munster plums are potatoes; and Gravesend sweetmeats are shrimps, to name over a few examples taken from English usage. At the moment the only American samples that can be offered are the Albany beef (sturgeon) and Cape Cod turkey (codfish).

DAY OF FORTY-EIGHT HOURS

Fact About Measurement of Time With Which Some May Not Be Thoroughly Familiar.

Dr. Willis E. Johnson, in his work on "Mathematical Geography," shows that "portions of three days may exist at the same time between 11:30 o'clock a. m. and 12:30 o'clock p. m. London time. When it is Monday noon at London Tuesday has begun at Cape Deshnef, but Monday morning has not yet dawned at Attu Island. Nearly half an hour of Sunday still remains there." What is known as the "International Date Line" divides the days from one another—this being situated on the one hundred and eightieth meridian. This runs due north and south, but there are two slight changes which have been made in it, for the sake of convenience.

While a day at any particular place is 24 hours long, each day lasts on earth at least 48 hours. Any given day, say Christmas, is first counted, as that day just west of the date line. The people just west of the date line, who first hailed Christmas have enjoyed 12 hours of it when it reaches England; 18 hours of it when it reaches central United States, and 24 hours of it, or a whole day, when it begins, in western Alaska, just east of the date line. Christmas, then, has existed 24 hours on the globe, but having just begun in western Alaska, it will tarry 24 hours longer among mankind. Owing, however, to the irregularity of the date line, days last more than 49 hours; in fact, 49 hours, 12 minutes.

TO AROUSE HEAVY SLEEPER

Writer Recommends That It Be Done With an Odor, Preferably Not Too Powerful.

"What is the best method of waking a soundly sleeping person?" is a question quite a few millions of persons would like to have answered, there being few who have not or do not continue to exhaust every scheme and method known to them to rouse some heavy-headed members of their families in time to eat breakfast and get to the office or school on time.

"With an odor, undoubtedly," a well-known physician replied to the question. "The sense of smell is the most easily aroused of any of the five. We have trained ourselves to disregard noises—or else we would get no sleep at all in a city. In the country the same sounds which we utterly disregard in town would awaken us instantly," says the Kansas City Star. "To shake a person in more or less successful, as a rule, but often it serves to only half rouse the sleeper, and he turns over and goes to sleep again, or, if he does wake, he is apt to be in a bad humor. Any really unusual noise is effective, but one can't think of a new noise-making method every morning."

Sense of Taste.

The sensation of taste, while of common and constant experience, is highly complicated in its nature. What is commonly called taste is not a simple sensation at all, but rather a complex. In addition to the actual functioning of the apparatus properly pertaining to the sense of taste, the tongue receives impressions of various other sorts, all of which go to make up this complex. As finally recorded in the consciousness, the taste of any substance has to do with its heat or coolness, perhaps with a mild amount of pain, certainly with astringency or acidity—which are in themselves further complexes of thermic and tactile sensations—and above all with smell. The reader will probably agree that ice cream and coffee are entirely different from their true selves when served at inopportune temperatures; and it is a matter of record that a person of the keenest taste may make the most ludicrous errors if asked, blindfolded and with his nose stopped, to identify substances placed in his mouth.

Where the Steak Went.

One rainy day I walked into a cafeteria, selected my dinner, and just as I stood at the checker's desk the party in front of me took a step back, knocking the tray from my hands and spilling the entire contents on the floor. I thought as I looked at the unfortunate mess that I failed to see the steak which had been on the tray, but supposed that it had fallen under a chair out of sight. A waitress stepped up to me and told me to select my dinner over again, which I did, with every one in the place watching me. I bolted the food as quickly as I could and went out into the rain once more, when upon opening my umbrella the piece of steak which I had failed to see in the restaurant fell from it—Chicago Tribune.

She Didn't Change.

We had learned the family name of our new neighbors and so were somewhat surprised when their small daughter, while playing with our children, announced that her surname differed from the rest of the family.

"Why, that isn't your mama's name, is it, I asked?"

"Oh, no, but she got married again, and you see I stayed just like I always was."—Chicago Tribune.

SAW COSSACK AT HIS BEST

Writer Waxen Enthusiastic Over Camp of Tired Men, "Soldiers to the Manner Born."

If you have read "Tarus Bulba," Gogol's story of the Cossack, then you will know what I mean when I say that last night I had a chance to see a real picture of the Cossack, writes William V. Duncan in the Yale Review. It was at sunset when over the tops of the white birches the heavens looked as if on fire, while to the right the clouds were like waves rolling over a sea of pink. I heard a shout, "The Cossacks are coming," and through the opening in the woods rode these lovers of war. The horse and the rider are one; both were tired, but there was something that told you that if the bugle had blown all the tiredness would have fallen away. They are soldiers to the manner born. War is life to them. If a thing is worth having it is worth fighting for. Even when they gathered in groups around the common pails and borrowed one another's spoons to eat the common meal their bearing was that of soldiers. Pigs can feed from a trough and you go away disgusted, but when you see these fellows back from a fight, delving into their mess, you stand to admire. Their leader was fully six feet seven inches tall, with a beard that said he was Russian of the Russians. All were well-formed, strong men, hardened to the out of doors. Their eschelon was not there, so they made themselves at home for the night on the ground. It was a sight to remember as our train pulled out of from the station, those Cossack groups around the fire, singing the songs of war to which their spirits revel.

OWE APPLE TREES TO FRANCE

Canadians Got Their First Shoots From a Nobleman Who Was Associated With Champlain.

It was from France that apple trees were first brought to Canada. A French nobleman named De Monts was associated with Samuel de Champlain in France's earliest colonizing projects in part of North America. Their first colony was planted on the rocky island of St. Croix, now Doucette's or Neutral Island, at the mouth of the River St. Croix, which forms part of the present boundary between New Brunswick and the state of Maine. After spending there the winter of 1604-05, the colonists removed to Port Royal, now Annapolis, Nova Scotia. The colonists were getting a foothold when their charter was revoked by the king of France in 1607, and the enterprise came to an end. However, in the 20th century that Champlain founded Quebec, and shortly afterwards De Monts went out to Champlain some young apple trees. They were planted and grew well. Such was the beginning of apple-growing in Canada. Twenty years later apple trees were introduced into that part of ancient Acadia that now forms the province of Nova Scotia.

Insects That Walk on Water.

Insects that walk on the water by means of pneumatic floats are the familiar spider and the pond skater. The pond skater really walks on pneumatic floats. There are tiny hairs on the feet of this insect, so fine that they cannot be seen, that are arranged to collect air. The amount collected in and about these hairs is sufficient to allow the insects to walk or float on the surface of the water. As each foot is put down it forms a cuplike depression, or tiny pit, in the water. The foot does not sink, because the air bubble that has been formed is too light to let it. A fine covering of hair protects the water spider, too, and even if it is submerged in the water it is never really wet; the hair keeps a layer of air between its body and the water. It looks like a white pearl when below the surface.

All That Is Left of the Mastodon.

An early find of mastodon bones from Shawangunk, Ulster county, New York, was presented to the University of Virginia by Thomas Jefferson, third president of the United States, who, like Theodore Roosevelt, twenty-sixth president, was an enthusiastic naturalist. It is noted by natural history that after the great transcontinental glacier receded large marshes were left in the region where these bones were unearthed, and in them these animals frequently became mired. Both Ulster and Orange counties have been prolific in mastodon remains. The Warren mastodon, dug up near Newburg in 1845, and now in the American museum, is the most perfect skeleton so far found. Bones are frequently turned up by farmers, and the specimens have even included hair, long, dense and shaggy, and of dark golden-brown color.

War Book by Native.

"The Strategy of the Great War" is the title of a volume of over 400 pages by a native of Gettysburg, William L. McPherson, brother of Judge D. P. McPherson, and son of the late Hon. and Mrs. Edward McPherson. It has just been issued by the Knickerbocker Press of G. P. Putnam's Sons. Part of the work had been contributed by the author to the Sunday issues of the "New York Tribune" and the contents are well worth preservation in this permanent form.

Between the covers of a single volume the author gives from a broad point of view and most clearly the story of the strategy of the Great War from the battle of the Marne in 1914 to the surrender or armistice Nov. 11, 1918. The volume should be in every public college and school library and should be read by every American, as it preserves a well rounded study of the greatest war of all ages and one we have been living through.

The volume is more than worth while in the way the mists are dispelled about the German and the 40 years of preparation for the war and the supposed efficiency of his war material. The author clearly shows they were on the wrong side of the moral issues of the fight. That they had not profited by experience and wisdom of the builders of the German empire. That obsessed with the fiction of being super men and having a long run of luck, they threw away the creation of a great Middle Europe and Asia empire in order to overwhelm France and England. How they in recklessness dragged the United States into the fight with their U-boat terror, and how in the end Ludendorff had been so obsessed with his own strategy and drive on the west front, that when Foch took the initiative out of his hand crashed in salient after salient, the German high command lacked the vision of what was ahead, wasted man power until they were weakened beyond recuperation and with the Americans astride the German base line of communications and supplies

CIVIL CASES AT NOV. COURT

A FEW CASES TRIED—MORE OF THEM SETTLED.

Ten Were Continued of the Twenty-three Cases on List—Review of the Cases.

The case of H. E. Rebert vs. C. F. Snyder reached a conclusion at November court by verdict. Plaintiff had bought eight hogs of defendant and weighed them on his own scales at 1000 pounds and several weeks later found that they weighed 355 pounds less and put the blame on his scales. Testimony was offered as to mechanical weakness in scales and expert testimony that such a difference in weight on same scales ten days apart was impossible. The jury found a verdict for the defendant. Butt & Butt for plaintiff, Wm. Hersh, Esq., for defendant.

Geo. W. Sherman vs. C. A. Stoner, a replevin case, was heard on Wednesday of last week by the court without a jury. Sherman produced a paper showing a gift of a grandfather's clock on Oct. 1, 1908, but the clock was never removed and was in the house of Kate O. Wolf in 1917 when she was found of weak mind and David M. Wolf appointed guardian. No notice was ever given guardian of the claim of ownership and when guardian sold the household effects the clock was sold, and bought by C. A. Stoner for $116. The defendant took position that gift was never delivered and was never legally completed and sale was good. After testimony was concluded the argument went over until testimony was written out. Wm. Hersh, Esq., for plaintiff, W. Arch. McClean, Esq., for defendant.

Of the 23 cases on the trial list of civil cases at the November court a number were settled as follows:

J. H. Stover vs. J. Herman Bream, was an action of trespass. Plaintiff had a break down of his car and left it stand on a road where it was afterwards hit by car of defendant. The case was settled by damages to car being paid.

William Deatrick vs. Philip Schriver, was an action of trespass. The defendant was driving a car along road and blew horn so that plaintiff would get to the proper side of road and let him pass. Plaintiff did not do this and defendant passing on wrong side then hit and killed a horse of plaintiff and settled by paying $150 for the horse killed. J. D. Swope, Esq., for plaintiff, Wm. Hersh, Esq., for defendant.

G. Raymond Forry vs. Cleason Rife was an appeal from docket of Chas. K. Yeager and was settled by defendant paying $15 and some costs. Wm. Hersh, Esq., for plaintiff, J. L. Williams, Esq., for defendant.

Chas. G. Grove vs. Harry E. Rebert was an assumpsit action over steers and was settled by paying $250, a counsel fee and costs. Wm. Hersh, Esq., for plaintiff, and Butt & Butt for defendant.

John Updegraff vs. Standard Stone Products Co. was an assumpsit action for wages and was settled by payment of $451 to plaintiff represented by J. L. Williams, Esq., and defendant by Wm. Hersh, Esq.

Frank M. Thompson vs. The Standard Stone Co. was an appeal from docket of J. A. Appller, Justice of the Peace, and was for wages and was settled by paying $75 to plaintiff, represented by J. L. Williams, Esq., and defendant by Wm. Hersh, Esq.

The three cases of C. M. Wolf, Mary L. Bushman, Admrx. of George Bushman, deceased, and F. E. Cramer for $155 for lumber, $50, auto hiring and flowers furnished the Gettysburg Baseball Club will be determined by a bill in equity in course of preparation which will present the matter to be adjudicated. The plaintiffs are represented by J. L. Williams, Es., and the defendants by Wm. Hersh and J. D. Keith, Esqs.

The ten cases continued were as follows:

Boblitz and Kopp vs. Alexander H. Rebert, to recover in sale of cattle.

Boblitz and Kopp vs. Curtis C. Rebert, to recover money in sale of cattle.

J. E. C. Miller and W. D. Himes vs. William Harner, involving sale of fodder, hay and straw.

John N. Hersh vs. East Berlin Railroad Co., a trespass case.

Francis J. Dunn vs. Wellington S. Rittase, a slander case. The settlement in progress was concluded.

Oyre & Son vs. Harris Brothers, a disputed contract and a settlement was pending and not concluded.

Katherine Pepple vs. John C. Pepple, a replevin for a copper kettle and a settlement was pending and not concluded.

Alex. H. Rebert, Admrx. of Edw. Rebert vs. Conrad Winters, involved a question of about the revival of a judgment.

G. Ober & Sons Co. vs. Ella W. Blocher, an action of assumpsit.

Clara E. Null and Clinton F. Null vs. George W. Groscoast, a trespass case.

at Sedan, with the German army cut in two, and an enveloping process going on that made it impossible to escape to the Rhine with but a remnant of the German army. They tried to escape the spectacle of the surrender of an army of three million men through an armistice. The writer smashes the idea that the Germans were supermen and shows they were bunglers, having thrown away the wisdom of the generation producing them and were outmatched in strategy and generalship. This intensely interesting story of strategy is written with a remarkable clearness and ability, so that the average reader will understand what is told. Mr. McPherson is to be congratulated upon his accomplishment.

THE DEATH LIST OF WEEK

GEORGE A. UPTON, WHO MARRIED A GETTYSBURG GIRL.

Jacob A. Hartman, of Littlestown—Mrs. S. C. Rice, Mrs. Fanus—A Child Dies of Burns.

George A. Upton, long in the hotel business, from which he retired several years ago, died on Friday, Nov. 21, at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., at an advanced age. For many years Mr. Upton was proprietor of the Ocean-side Hotel at Magnolia on the Massachusetts North Shore, and in his long connection with this old-time house which is widely known, he from time to time enlarged the property so that from a former house of moderate size, it became one of the largest of the summer hotels in the East. Mr. Upton drew to his house guests who returned season after season, entire families spending months at his hotel, and he so built up his business that before he retired he was obliged to enlarge his dining room so that it would seat at one time almost six hundred guests. He secured adjoining cottages in Magnolia, in which he lodged many guests who could not be accommodated with rooms in the main house. In all this business Mr. Upton had become widely known not only to the public, but among hotel men as well. Magnolia always had been his home, but he usually went to some other place for a part of each winter season. Mr. Upton's first wife was Miss Ann Robert McCurdy, daughter of the late Hon. Robert McCurdy and sister of Charles M. McCurdy, of Bellefonte. She died in 1876 and Mr. Upton remarried about twelve years ago.

Joy township and was especially interested in the Reformed Church of which he was a life long member. Miss Elizabeth Miller, of Mt. Joy township, became the first wife of J. A. Hartman and four children were born of this union. Dr. H. M. Hartman of Gettysburg, the late Mrs. Franklin Rudisill and Mrs. George E. Spangler, of near Gettysburg; and Mrs. Emma Schriver, of Philadelphia. Ryde's Egg Mash

"Makes Them Lay"

That's what you want at the price of eggs to-day. Makes every hen a payer by producing eggs nearly all the time instead of about half the time. Eggs is a question of feed. Give hens egg-producing feed and they will produce the eggs. No feed, or the wrong kind of feed, means no eggs.

Ryde's Egg Mash

is an unequalled egg producer, containing animal and vegetable nutrition in the correct proportions to produce results. No guess work or experimenting on the part of the feeder. The increased egg yield overcomes the cost of the mash.

More Eggs, Better Eggs, Bigger Eggs

Try a bag to-day on those hens that are backward and you will be more than pleased with the results.

Ryde's Cream Calf Meal

DELCO-LIGHT was designed and built by men who were raised in farm homes—who experienced the discomforts and inconveniences of farm life—and who set out deliberately years ago to develop an electric plant that would provide city advantages for rural communities.

They were the same men whose engineering talent had made DELCO Starting, Lighting and Ignition Equipment for automobiles the standard of the world—

They knew electricity—and they knew the needs and limitations of farm life—

They knew that an electric plant to give service in a farm home must be simple, so that it would not get out of order and require complicated repairs—

It must be easily operated and require little attention—

It must be very economical in operation—

It must be built to stand hard usage and it must last indefinitely—

It required five years to develop a plant that would measure up to these specifications.

There were five years of hard engineering effort back of DELCO-LIGHT before the first plant was put on the market three and a half years ago.

Today DELCO-LIGHT is furnishing the conveniences and comforts of electricity to more than Seventy-five Thousand farm homes.

It is providing an abundance of clean, bright, economical electric light for these homes. It is furnishing power to pump water, operate washing machine, churn, separator, vacuum cleaner, electric iron, milking machine, and other small machinery.

And everywhere it is demonstrating its wonderful efficiency—and actually paying for itself in time and labor saved.

Doctor Tells How to Detect Harmful Effects of Tobacco Try These SIMPLE TESTS

New York: Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins hospital, says: Many men who smoke, chew or sniff incessantly and who are seemingly healthy are suffering from progressive organic ailments. Thousands of them would never have been afflicted had it not been for the use of tobacco, and thousands would soon get well if they would only stop the use of tobacco. The chief habit-forming principle of tobacco is nicotine, a deadly poison which, when absorbed by the system, slowly affects the nerves, membranes, tissues and vital organs of the body. The harmful effect of tobacco varies and depends on circumstances. One will be afflicted with general debility, others with coughs of the throat, indigestion, constipation, catarrhs, nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of memory, lack of will power, mental confusion, etc. Others may suffer from heart disease, bronchitis, tuberculosis, hardening of the arteries, tuberculosis, blindness or even cancer or the common skin diseases known as tobacco burn. If you use tobacco in any form you can easily detect the harmful effects by making the following simple tests. Stand about one full page from a book. In the course of reading your voice becomes hoarse, throat and larynx inflamed, and you must frequently clear your throat. The chances are that your throat is affected by tobacco and it may be the beginning of more serious trouble. Next, in the morning before taking your usual smoke, walk up three flights of stairs at a regular pace, then stop. If you find that you are out of breath, your heart beat is forced, trembling or irregular, you may be a victim of functional, or organic heart trouble. If you feel that you must smoke, chew or sniff to quiet your nerves, you are a slave to the tobacco habit, and are positively poisoning yourself with the deadly drug, nicotine. In other cases you have just two alternatives—keep on with the self-poisoning process irrespective of the dangers and suffer the consequences, or give up the habit and escape the dangers. You can overcome the craving and stop the habit in a very short time by using the following simple tests. Go to any drug store and ask for LANE'S GOLD TABLETS. Take one tablet after each meal, and in a comparatively short time you will have no desire for tobacco; the craving will have left you. With the nicotine poison out of your system your general health will greatly improve.

When asked about these simple tests, one of our leading doctors said: "It is truly a wonderful remedy for the tobacco habit; every shade of smoking or chewing and sniffing tobacco is counteracted by the constituents in which the remedy is so carefully formulated. And so would not permit the use of our medicine to be used by anyone who is not a smoker or a tobacco user. It is a powerful remedy for the tobacco habit, and it is a comparatively short time you will have no desire for tobacco; the craving will have left you. With the nicotine poison out of your system your general health will greatly improve."

The Cad

By VINCENT G. PERRY

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Let's review was just near enough to the city to be caught in the whirl of election excitement. From her little home on the hill Lenore could see the villagers stopping here and there to enter into controversy or exchange good wishes for the future of the district attorney. The thought thrilled Lenore to her finger tips.

Away in the city she knew Charles Floggett, the man of her choice. Was working as he had never worked before—working for the good of the community, for her and the ideals he held dear. If they all knew Charles as she knew him, he would not lose a vote; she felt sure of it. From the very day she had entered his office as stenographer she had learned to respect him, and now love was mingled with that respect.

He had insisted that she take a rest the last month of his campaign, as they had planned to be married soon after the election. Now she wished she had insisted upon staying by his side to see the fight to the finish.

A special Sunday supplement lay open at her side. There, in a large four-column cut, was a picture of Charles with the governor's daughter by his side. "Candidate for District Attorneyship and His Most Enthusiastic Campaigner," it was headed.

Lenore knew that no one could be a more enthusiastic campaigner for Charles than she had been; but she was not jealous of the governor's daughter, she told herself. It was all on the campaign—part of a big game.

Up the hill she could see a messenger boy wending his way. With that strange instinct which messenger boys usually arouse, she scented at once that he was carrying a message for her. Sure enough he was—from Charles. She opened the note with fervent haste almost before she had signed for it. It had been dashed off in a hurry, she could tell by the shaky letters, but they were the same large open letters that distinguished Charles' penmanship.

Faster and Faster the Little Car Bounded Forward.

"Dear Lenore:

"I cannot let you come down to meet me tonight after the returns, for I have a confession to make: I love some one else, dear. She will be at my side tonight. The governor's daughter has promised to become my wife as soon as you will set me free from my promise. It is to your influence I owe my success today, Lenore, but I know you will not stand in my light, and will forgive me. Believe me to be always,

"Your friend,

"CHARLES."

Poor Lenore sank to a chair, hardly able to believe what she read. Surely she had read it wrong. But no! Even through the tears she could read the same hard, cruel words. Her head swam dizzily, everything went black and she felt herself slipping.

"Lenore, open your eyes; speak to me. It is Jimmy!"

It was some minutes later when these words brought Lenore to her senses. Before she opened her eyes she could feel a man's arm tight around her and her head resting upon this shoulder. Jimmy! After all those months!

It felt good to have some one there—some one who would understand. On Jimmy's shoulder she wept out the whole story. Jimmy took the letter and read it for himself.

"The cad!" he hissed. "The dirty, worthless cad!"

"So she will be at his side tonight, will she?" Jimmy cried. "To see him, the pretended district attorney! Not by a jugful! It isn't too late to lose the election yet. He has reckoned without Jimmy Davis of the Star. This letter on a front page extra will cook his goose. 'His woman who has made him what he is for governor's wealthy heiress.' A full sweep heading like that will sway the crowd away from him as if a cyclone had struck them." "Not that, Jimmy, not that!" Lenore had risen and put a restraining hand on his shoulder. "Charles must not lose the election. It is his right to choose his own wife. I will not complain."

"What? Do you think I would let him get away with this? He is turning down the girl he won from me, the sweetest little girl in the world, one I would die for."

"If you think that much of me, Jimmy, you will destroy that letter and forget that you have seen it."

Jimmy's lip curled with derision. "I won't do that. I will publish it in the Star. It will be on the press in half an hour. You can't see it that way now, dear, but in a few weeks' time you will thank me for exposing this cad."

"You must not publish it. I won't permit it!" Lenore faced him with flushed cheeks, determination shining from her eyes.

"You can't stop me," Jimmy was just as determined; battle was shining in his eyes. In vain did Lenore threaten and plead.

"He has been a cad! He deserves to be defeated, you will have to admit it!" Jimmy cried, as he saw himself triumphing.

A new light came suddenly into Lenore's eyes. "He will be defeated," she cried. "I will take you to the Star in my car, so you will be sure to get there in time for an extra. I will be ready in a minute."

It was just a minute later when Jimmy sat beside her in her roadster. "We will make speed," she cried, as she turned on the power. Faster and faster the little car bounded forward, whizzed past other cars and struck the open stretch by the lake. It had been speed before, but on the open stretch the car traveled at a maddening rate. Nearer and nearer the city came; faster and faster the car seemed to bound. "Almost there. Just one more mile; hang on!" Lenore gasped as they rounded another bend.

A big red car loomed up in front. The little car slackened speed as they passed. Lenore recognized the occupants—Charles and the governor's daughter.

"I wonder if they recognized us?" Jimmy gloated.

"Yes; didn't you see the surprised look on Charles' face?" A sob cut off Lenore's voice, but it was lost in the whirl of the wind as it struck the little roadster, again traveling at full speed.

"We are on the wrong road!" Jimmy suddenly realized it.

"Yes, and we are going to stay on the wrong road. Hang on! There is lots of speed left! A move from you and we will both be dashed against that fence!" From sheer fright Jimmy kept his seat. "It was an hour later when the car came to a halt."

"Sixty miles from a telegraph office or a telephone, and the polis close in ten minutes." There was real triumph in Lenore's tone. "Now, Mr. Jimmy Davis of the Star do your worst!"

"The whole thing's a failure," Jimmy sank back on the cushions with a groan of disappointment. The ride had knocked all the courage out of him. "It was all a frameup to get Floggett, but you beat us."

"The letter—it wasn't from Charles!" Lenore faced him with blazing eyes.

"No; it was written by his former secretary, a good forgery."

"You said 'All the indignation of a fiery little soul was contained in those words.'"

Unnoticed by the two in the roadster, a big roadster had halted by their side.

"What does it mean?" It was Charles. He had followed the runaway car and had heard the confession. Lenore was very brave when she told him the story, but she felt very weak and insignificant as she nestled in his arms on the homeward journey.

"Brave little champion," he whispered, as he drew her very close. "A man couldn't lose with a sweet heart like you."

TRACED DESCENT OF HORSE

Oregon Professor Left Records of His Researches in the Marshes of Oregon.

Horses of the miocene tertiary times, and during the pliocene age, which came later, roamed around the marshes of Oregon, according to Professor Condon of the University of Oregon. A letter which the professor wrote a woman in Nashville, Ore., thirty years ago, has been discovered, in which he referred to some of his own specimens of the early horse.

"There were in Oregon three or four species of the small horse," the professor wrote. "I have fragments of many individuals of several of these species. The one of which I have the most complete skeleton was about two feet high. He lived during the miocene tertiary times."

"My fossils would not warrant me in speaking of more than three hoofs on each foot; the center one on each foot being large, and the other ones small. Each footlock bone furnished him with what was an external hoof."

"Belonging to a later period, the pliocene, I have other horse remains. The older classification gives the name Hipparion to the pliocene horse. The side hoofs of this animal were still external, and therefore, to some extent, functional. These horses multiplied in species, as well as in numbers, varying in size until the horse proper, or equus, came on the stage with only rudimentary fragments of the metatarsal bones of the side hoofs provided for."

DEATH LAID TO EVIL SPIRITS

Bangalas Tribe in Africa Refuse to Believe That Mortal Disease Is Certain.

Strange rites and ceremonies still abound in Africa. Most of these have their origin in superstitions instigated by the medicine men or magicians of a tribe for their own betterment, while many are adopted as customs of a tribe.

Foremost of the funeral "celebrations" in Africa is that of a tribe called Bangalas, near the Quango river. Here the deceased is asked to state the cause of his death, and is often prosecuted before being buried.

The death of an African in these sections is never announced, and, only on inquiry is anyone told of the death of a tribe member. When the death is generally known the relatives come and fall into a state of excitement and wallings, with frequent interruptions of a hilarious nature. Drums and musical instruments are assembled and the revelry is continued until after sunrise. This ceremony occupies two days. The body is brought out during these ceremonies and fastened in a sitting posture in a chair and placed at the door of his hut. The idea of the natives is that the deceased shall share in the festivities.

Only the mother and wife of the deceased show signs of grief. After the "celebrations" the deceased is put under rigid examination as to what or who caused his death. Naturally, he is unable to answer, and the crowd abuses him, demanding an answer. At last it is agreed that he was killed through the aid of evil spirits. The body is then taken to the cemetery.

The inhabitants do not believe that everyone must die, that evil spirits alone interfere with lives.

ISLAND OF MANY MEMORIES

Visitor to St. Helena Almost Sure to Find Something to Remind Him of Home.

St. Helena, the island where Napoleon Bonaparte spent some six years of exile and where he died in 1821, has one of the most peculiar landscapes in the world, and by reason of the great variety of trees and plants that grow there.

For many years the island was a sort of ocean crossroads where all ships plying between Europe and the East stopped for supplies. It was uninhabited when discovered and most of its population is made up of the descendants of persons who deserted from passing vessels. European, African and Asiatic peoples are all represented.

Nearly all of these settlers of many races and nationalities tried to introduce into the island plants and trees from their home countries, as people are wont to do the world over. Some of these failed to survive, but a surprising variety of crops and trees thrive in the semi-tropical climate and rich soil of the little island. As a result the English oak tree today grows beside bananas and palms. Raising dates is an industry of the valleys, while Scotch pines grow on the uplands, and some of the level land is covered with English gorse. Lemon and orange trees are to be found not far from patches of bramble and groves of willow. A visitor from almost any part of the world may look about and find a bit of landscape to remind him of home.—"Niksah," in Chicago News.

Electric Lamp Best for Mines.

Nowadays the up-to-date miner carries a package of electricity about with him while underground. It is a small storage battery attached to the back of his belt, and is connected by a cord with a lamp fastened to the front of his cap. The lamp, provided with a reflector, throws a flood of light in front of the miner. But its chief advantage is absolute safety. In olden days miners (who must, of course, have light) carried about with them open flame lamps. These caused innumerable disastrous accidents through ignition of coal dust or gases. Sir Humphry Davy's invention of a safety lamp whose flame was protected by a wire gauze, saved an immense number of lives. It is in common use today, but the electric mine lamp is better and more convenient.

Largest Inland Sea.

The Caspian sea is the largest inland sea in the world. It has an area exceeding 170,000 square miles, and it is situated between Europe and Asia to the southeast of Russia. It lies in a deep depression, and in a past age, geologists tell us, probably formed with the Black and Aral seas, an inland sea of vast extent. Salmon and sturgeon are abundant and the seal fishery is important.

The rivers Ural and Volga flow into it. Astrakhan, Baku and Astrakhan are its chief ports. Waterways, consisting of rivers and canals, connect it with the Black and Baltic seas. Of its area, 865 square miles belong to the islands. At the present time its surface lies 86 feet below the level of the ocean.—Detroit News.

Sensible Decision.

"Wasn't your new French maid competent?" asked Mrs. Gawker. "Oh, yes," replied Mrs. Bunderby. "Then, why did you discharge her?" "The first time Mr. Bunderby saw her I caught him gazing at himself in a mirror and readjusting his tie. I may have lost my girlish beauty, but, thank heaven, I haven't lost my brains."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Two sites for the proposed furniture factory, Littlestown, have been secured, one on the Sell farm and one on the McSherry farm. The Baltimore parties who will place the plant are expected this week to view the sites.

This Means You.

When you get up with a bad taste in your mouth, a dull tired feeling, no relish for food and are constipated, you may know that you need a dose of Chamberlain's Tablets. They not only cause an agreeable movement of the bowels, but cleanse and invigorate the stomach and improve the digestion. People's Drug Store.

Grover C. Myers, postmaster at Gardners, recently shot a large swan at his summer home near Laurel that measured five feet four inches in height and seven feet three inches from tip to tip. While getting the bird ready for the taxidermist someone near Mr. Myers said he had skinned a "swan" and the eavesdropper thought he said "fawn" and reported this to the Game Commissioner at Harrisburg who sent four game wardens to search the premises for the "deer." They were profuse in apologies when they unraveled the mystery.

This Woman Found Relief.

Zwingli Reformed congregation of East Berlin, sent a barrel of jarred fruit to the Hoffman Orphanage near Littlestown. Another barrel will be shipped within the next few weeks.

FOLEY'S HONEY-TAR

FOR BACKACHE, KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

Owing to the increased business of the Arendtsville National Bank S. A. Skinner, the cashier, has had an assistant appointed to help him in the person of W. A. Raffensperger.

Don't Disregard a Cold.

A neglected cold may develop into most serious sickness. The influenza and pneumonia that swept the country a year ago were preceded by an epidemic of colds. Foley's Honey and Tar will check a cold if taken in time. It loosens phlegm and mucous clears air passages, eases hoarseness, stops tickling throat. Sold everywhere.

Captain and Mrs. Geo. N. Acker, of New Oxford, have shipped their household goods to Washington, D. C., where they intend to make their future home and where Dr. Acker will practice.

Tells How He Was Helped.

James McCrery, Berrien Center, Mich., says he was troubled with kidney and bladder trouble for two years and used several kinds of medicine without any benefit, but Foley Kidney Pills gave him relief from aches and pains and stopped backache and rheumatic pains; ease lameness. Sold everywhere.

Miss Clara McGinness, of Littlestown, was chosen as teacher for Black's public school and has assumed her duties.

Constipation.

Most laxatives and cathartics afford only temporary relief and should be used only for that purpose. When you want permanent relief take Chamberlain's Tablets and be careful to observe the directions with each package. These tablets not only move the bowels, but improve the appetite and strengthen the digestion. People's Drug Store.

Luke Pentz, who spent the past summer in the employ of his uncle, Spencer Snyder, in Huntington township, has gone to Fairfield where he will spend the winter.

A Good Cough Medicine for Children

Mrs. J. W. Phillips, Redon, Ga., phoned to J. M. Floyd, the merchant there, for a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and said she had bought a bottle of it at his store recently and that it was doing her children so much good that she wanted to keep up the treatment. "You will find nothing better for coughs and colds in children or for yours. It keeps the cough loose, expectoration easy and soon frees the system from the cold. People's Drug Store."

Aviator Eugene Bowers, son of Mrs. Mary Bowers, of East Berlin, fell with his aeroplane while flying in the vicinity of Harrisburg, one day last week. In the fall he broke his nose and was badly shaken up. He is in the Harrisburg Hospital.

VOICES WOMAN'S IDEAS
AT ROUND TABLE

Miss Lillian Wald of New York, leader in suffrage affairs, is one of the few women to sit in at the Round Table Industrial Conference. She was named to the place when Carrie Chapman Catt, national suffragist, could not attend.
She is seated in the "Public"

MAY NOT KNOW PAGO PAGO
Yet Town on Island of Tutuila, in American Samoa, is Worth Attention of Tourists.
Pago Pago, on the island of Tutuila in American Samoa, would probably be an easy winner in competition for the least-known town of its size
under the American flag.
Most Americans never heard of Pago Pago; yet it has an excellent harbor, is an important naval coaling station, and is governed by American naval officers.
The island of Tutuila is one of six little tropical atolls which constitute American Samoa. They are all mountainous and are picturesque with their jungle-covered steep and their great palm groves sheltering little white native towns.
These natives are a peculiarly attractive people, as any American Jackie who has spent a while at Pago Pago will tell you. They are kindly, hospitable, and full of fun, while some of the women, especially the half-castes, are really beautiful.
The favorite native diversion, strangely enough, is cricket, which was taught the Samoans by British missionaries long ago, and has well nigh supplanted all the really indigenous sports. But the Samoan has made of cricket a thing after his own barbaric heart. He plays with 40 or 50 men on a side, so that a grand scrimmage is inevitable; he roots with tom-tom and with intense excitement; and the winners always perform a "serpentine" which has all the characteristics of a savage war dance.

TURN TO PRIVATE CURRENCY
People of Siberia Satisfied With the Trade Checks That the Merchants
Have Issued.
Private trade checks, issued by firms and wealthy individuals, have largely replaced the national currency in Siberia. The ruble—in any form outside the metal disk—is too unstable to be promoted of real value and the workmen who find himself with pockets full of "Onsk" or "Kerensky" currency need hold no fear of being considered a plutocrat. For the ruble, up a few months ago worth half a dollar in exchange, has diminished to somewhat less than four cents, face value. True, the green paper variety labeled "Kerensky" commands a high premium than do the yellow-backed ills of Onsk; true, again, the tender of the former is worth more than either of the two aforementioned. But for all practical purposes the people of Vladivostok receive and demand—quite as a matter of course—the quaint slips issued by their tradesmen. Enterprise on the part of the merchants, it may be observed, keeps pace with the times; for example, one Vladivostok restaurateur has had his checks made to read: "American Grill. Two Rubles. Not Good for Ever."
Swordfish a Fathead.
It surely would be imprudent to address that formidable creature, the swordfish as Fathead, yet the term would be quite appropriate.
The heads of one hundred average swordfish will yield sixty-five gallons of an oil that has high market value.
Refined and sun bleached, it is indistinguishable from whale oil, and fetches the same price. In fact, commercially, it is whale oil.
Whale oil is obtained on a much larger scale from halibut heads, which are treated in the same way as the swordfish heads—i. e., cooked to a pulp with steam and pressed. A short ton of them will yield forty gallons of oil. Boston and Gloucester (Mass.)
annually produce twelve thousand gallons of refined whale oil from halibut heads.
Away back in the '70s somebody discovered that salmon heads were rich in oil, and since then the production of it has been a considerable industry in connection with the Pacific salmon fishery. By 1895 the annual output had risen to fifty thousand gallons.
His Identity.
"I see you have a new professional man in town," said the picture en-larger, who visited the hamlet sufficiently often to be mildly interested in the happenings thereof. "I noticed the sign, 'J. W. Bloor, O. D., M. T. D., D.
C.' What is he practicing, anyhow—logomachy?"
"Nope; economy and eye doctoring," replied the landlord of the Petunia tavern.—Kansas City Star.

MORE THAN USUALLY WARM
Sailors Declare the Gulf Stream is Outdoing Itself at This Season,
for Some Reason.
Marine men blame the Gulf stream for the summer weather prevailing along the Atlantic coast. They say the water of the Gulf stream is almost boiling.
In Norfolk, Va., the temperature was 86 degrees. A hundred miles on to sea just before the Gulf stream is reached the temperature was 101, according to information brought there by marine men. Within one day's run from Norfolk by water there was a difference of nearly 40 degrees in the temperature. It was so hot in the Gulf stream, marine men said, it was almost unbearable to remain on deck during the day.
Vessels passing through the peculiar water during the day say the weather is hotter than they have ever experienced before. A difference in the temperature of the water dipped from ship with that of the ocean itself is the difference, marine men report, between moderately cool water and the warm enough almost to poach an egg.
The Gulf stream water is lighter than the remainder of the ocean and when first dipped foams and bubbles like water just on the point of boiling.
It was reported that an American destroyer would go out to the Gulf stream with a party of experts for the purpose of making observations to use by the government and to ascertain if reports brought in by merchant ships are authentic.
COULD FEEL FOR AFFLICTION
Man Had Not Forgotten How It Felt to Be Deprived of the Blessing of Sight.
He looked as if he owned a bank
And he was talking to a man who looked as if he owned two.
And while they confabbed in front of a hotel a wrinkled woman came up to them leading a wrinkled man. She was selling matches—5 cents a box three for—
The one-bank man waved aside the matches, but put some money in the woman's hands, and asked her unlucky companion how he came to lose his sight.
The blind man said that he had never had any sight to lose. He was born that way.
The man of the two banks chipped in with a donation, then the couple moved on, the blind man, philosophically serene and the woman shrilling her slogan—"Matches! Five cents a box, three for—"
And the one-bank man said to the one who owned two:
"I had my eyes bandaged for a week once. Blindness is a tragic thing."
Which showed that, in his case anyhow, a little knowledge was not a dangerous thing.—Washington Star.

BLANTON'S ROLL CALL
HARDY EXPENSIVE

Representative Blanton of Texas is the champion "objector" of congress. Every time an objection is made—it means a roll call.
A roll call consumes 160 minutes.
Each minute means $100 of Uncle Sam's money. Blanton has insisted upon 134 roll calls in this session. Figure is out for yourself.
It means $53,000 worth of roll calls.
Almost anyone who will trouble to search his memory, can discover a doll somewhere between the covers of many a book which he has read. Beginning with a "slighting reference to them under the name of babies," in Sydney's "Arcadia," and noting the mention of a doll by Charlotte Bronte, this writer concludes that, until the nineteenth century, dolls were neglected by English authors and that they appear more frequently in French than in English fiction. Dickens seems to have had more to say about dolls than any other English author; but the doll Nobby is an important personage in "Mr. Wells"
"Peter and Joan," and the dolls' house in "Tono-Bungay" contained 85 dolls, although with none of them does the reader become personally acquainted.
Jerry and Rosa, in "The Golden Age," are also remembered.
German Farming Methods.
Germany may have led the world in some branches of technical skill but her farming methods left much to be desired if the bitter contempt poured upon them by a Bunyip soldier can serve as a standard. Bunyip, Victoria, Australia, is proud of his knowledge of soil-culture, and 17 months spent as a prisoner of war at threepence a day on a farm in Silesia, Germany, made one of its finest citizens more convinced than ever that Bunyip is always best. When he returned to Australia and applied for a farm he was asked, as a joke, if he could give a reference from his previous employer. His reply would have been gall and wormwood to the Silesian.
